An Unkind Populace Now Says that Governor Waite Is Not Right In His Head—Police and Militia Are Still Camped Opposite Each Other.

DENVER, Colo., March 17.—Armed peace reigned in Denver yesterday. A great deal of excitement still exists. Gen. McCook and the federal troops are still here and they will remain until all danger of riot and bloodshed is over. Gen. McCook will simply confine himself to maintaining the public peace.

The city was comparatively quiet at 8 o'clock in the morning, all hostilities having been suspended awaiting the result of the conference between Gen. McCook, commanding the government troops, and Gov. Waite and his advisers, which was to take place at 9 o'clock. Five companies of the Seventh United States Infantry were encamped at the Union depot, ready to move on the city hall at a moment's notice should the governor request him to do so. The militia were withdrawn from around the city hall, and the streets leading to the building were almost deserted. The police force, greatly re-enforced, was still under arms at the city hall. It was understood their fighting force numbered about 350 men.

At 8:30 o'clock the militia guard at Douglas place, where Gov. Waite resides, was recalled to the armory, and for the first time since 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon the building was left unprotected. Shortly afterward his excellency left for the executive chambers, but refused to discuss the situation further than to say that he would like a consultation with Gen. McCook of the United States army at 10 o'clock. The conference, which was held in the presence of no other person, lasted but a short time, and it is understood was exceedingly peppery, the governor being very angry because Gen. McCook refused to aid the governor in his purpose to seat the new commissioners, but confined himself to dispersing the crowd and maintaining the peace. At the termination of the interview the governor sent Gen. McCook a letter in which he withdrew his request to Gen. McCook to leave Denver with the federal troops.

All of the city offices were open for business in the morning, but there was little going on. A few policemen were sent out on patrol duty, but most of the force was continued on guard in the basement of the city hall.

It was decided at 10:30 last night to submit to the Supreme court the question from the governor whether or not he has the right to remove and appoint members of the fire and police board. This would seem to assure a peaceful solution of the trouble that has stirred Denver during the last few days. The governor promised to withdraw his forces and the new police board was to be given a room in the city hall in which to organize the old board to keep its present quarters and exercise its usual powers at least until the court had passed on the matter.

At 11:30, however, Chief of Police Stone received an intimation that the governor meditated a raid before morning in spite of the agreement. Fifty officers with rifles and shotguns were at once posted in the dark building and notice sent the sheriff. Later the chief began massing his forces in the city hall in much larger numbers.

There has yet been no apparent movement on the part of the governor to again order out the militia, but Game Warden Callicott has sworn in 150 deputies, who under the state law have the powers of deputy sheriffs to guard the governor and do his bidding.

A meeting of prominent citizens was held in Judge Yeamans' office, at which the question of the governor's sanity was seriously discussed. At 11:30 the meeting adjourned until morning. If it is decided to procure a lunacy inquiry affidavits will be filed with Judge LeFevre of the County court, who will issue an order and it will become the duty of the sheriff to arrest the governor and hold him for a jury trial. The governor's office is guarded by personal friends, heavily armed, and his house is similarly watched at night. His friends ridicule the idea that he is insane.

Gen. McCook says there is no doubt that had a gun been fired Thursday the governor would have been lynched within half an hour, to the state's lasting disgrace. Gen. McCook says he has the United States troops here only to protect public property, and they will remain in town until the excitement is over, especially since there is a large number of desperate men in town ready to foment riot so as to make robbery possible.

The governor has not ordered the outside militia to come to Denver, but they are under orders and drawing pay. He has instructed livery stable men to have 100 horses ready for his use to-day. This strange order has added to the general uneasiness.

The old board holding the city hall says it will defy the whole state militia, which can not muster much over 800 men.

The state troops at Durango, Boulder, Colorado Springs, Grand Junction and other centers have been uniformed and under arms all day, ready to take special trains to Denver, and the state troops in this city have been on call. Exciting reports have been flying all over the state. Many people regard the governor's military demonstration as a big bluff to show his contempt for Judge Graham's injunction and compel the judge, if possible, to arrest him.

Gen. McCook has removed the troops from the Union depot to the Gettysburg building on Champa street. There they will remain until further orders.

Sheriff Burchinell sent the following telegram in the afternoon to Secretary of War Lamont at Washington:

"I am quite able to maintain peace here unless the militia of the state is used against me. Nobody but the governor is seeking to disturb the peace and he is acting in contempt of the District court of this country."

Twenty prominent citizens also sent a long message to the Colorado delegation in congress reviewing the situation, and asking that the federal troops be not removed, as bloodshed and destruction of property would surely follow.

Gov. Waite appears to entertain some fear for his life. His house was guarded by a detachment of the state militia, and no one was allowed to enter until after his business had been stated and the executive given his consent to see the visitor.

The present conflict has been brought about by the friction which has existed between the governor and the people of Denver and of Arapahoe county, in which Denver is located, ever since he came into office. He owed his election to the populist vote in the rural districts and small towns of the state. He came into office with a strong prejudice against him in Denver. Two months ago he removed two members of the police board. The case was carried to the Supreme court, which held that the governor had not exceeded his authority. The two deposed members thereupon yielded and Jackson Orr and D. J. Martin were appointed instead. Later the governor deposed both of them on the charge that they were protecting the gambling houses and appointed S. D. Barnes and Dennis Mullins.

Orr and Jackson, however, refused to vacate and obtained an injunction from Judge Graham of the District court, restraining the governor and the new members from taking possession of the office, the court holding that the governor could appoint, but in case of resistance could not induct his appointees into office, that power remaining in the judiciary; that is to say, if resistance was made it would be necessary to take the proper proceedings in court to obtain possession.

The governor, however, ignored the injunction and on Wednesday night called upon the First regiment of the state militia to assemble, following up this action Thursday by orders to march on the city hall and take it by force if necessary.

The police and fire departments, in the meantime, had prepared to hold the city hall by force of arms, and the entire police force was placed on duty at the building, in addition to several hundred of the tough citizens of Denver, with records as man-killers, had been sworn in by Sheriff Burchinell as deputy sheriffs to re-enforce the police. The members of the fire department are also armed and have lines of hose laid throughout the city hall. To complete the features of this condition of civil war the surgical department of the city is prepared to take care of the wounded in case of conflict.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—General McCook telegraphed army headquarters here that Gov. Waite had applied for the use of United States troops. He had taken the troops to Denver and transmitted the application of the governor to the department. It has not yet been laid before Secretary Lamont, who must in turn submit it to the President before action can be taken on the governor's request.

Gives Work to 1,000 Men.

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 17.—The Haskell & Barker car works at Michigan City have secured a contract for 1,500 cars and the immense plant, employing 1,000 men, will resume operations within a few days, after six months' idleness.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 17.—The Marston iron works, closed in January, will start up on Monday, giving employment to 500 hands. A Philadelphia syndicate has taken charge.

The Bland Bill Not Signed.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The senate not being in session yesterday the Vice-President can not sign the seigniorage bill until that body meets again Monday. It was, however, presented to Speaker Crisp yesterday by Chairman Pearson of the committee on enrolled bills.

SUGAR MEN FIGHT
THE TARIFF BILLGOT THE EARTH BUT WANT A FENCE TOO.

Now They Rise to Demand That the Reciprocity Agreements Be Terminated at Once—Speculation on the Result of the Bland Bill Becoming a Law.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—It is now said that the sugar men are angry. They say that the reciprocity agreements must be terminated, otherwise sugar will come in free and the interests of their sugar growing constituents will be ruined. But if the reciprocity agreements are terminated the pork interests of Chicago, which alone exceed in value the southern sugar interests, will be badly damaged by the reimposition of the embargo, and the flour manufacturers, whose productions will be practically shut out of Cuba, will suffer. The talk that the house will support the sugar duty because of the revenue is heard no more, because, if the reciprocity treaties are continued, sugar will come in free and produce no revenue. It is possible that the original recommendation of the ways and means committee providing for free raw sugar, a quarter-cent duty on refined and a gradual decrease of the bounty till it terminates in 1903 and the continuation of the reciprocity agreements, will be adopted as the best solution of the problem.

It seems likely that the democratic majority will make whatever changes they intend in the schedules between now and Tuesday, so that the bill can be reported to the senate that day. It is understood the committee has under consideration a suggestion looking to a provision for a check upon the valuations of imports made by New York appraisers by amending the bill so as to require that all invoices shall be sent to the treasury department at Washington.

THE SUNDY CIVIL BILL

Enloe Renews His Threats Against the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—In the house yesterday the pending amendment was that of Mr. Enloe (Tenn.) authorizing the investigation of the coast and geodetic survey to determine the advisability of the transfer of this bureau to the navy department. Mr. Enloe announced that as long as he had a seat in the house he would each year renew the fight until the coast and geodetic survey was reformed or abolished.

After some debate on minor amendments an amendment was agreed to, limiting to $125,000 the expenditures of the coast and geodetic survey.

Mr. Wilson (rep., Wash.) made a vigorous speech on the discrimination against the western coast in the matter of river and harbor improvements. Mr. Cogswell (rep., Mass.) characterized Mr. Wilson's remarks as unjust. Pending a speech by Mr. Catchings (dem., Miss.) in defense of the Missouri river appropriation the house took a recess until 8 o'clock.

About fifty members were present at the night session. A bill to relieve W. H. Coburn from the charge of desertion led to hot words between Mr. McKeighan (Neb.) and Mr. Talbert (S. C.). The bill was finally reported favorably. After action on several private pension bills the house adjourned.

COINING THE SEIGNIORAGE.

What the Bland Bill Means Should It Become a Law.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Should the Bland bill become a law the mints will at once begin the work of transforming the silver bullion into dollars. It will take about five years to do the job, though were the bullion distributed among the three mints in proportion to their capacity it could be done in less time. The cost of transfer, however, is too great to make the distribution advisable.

As the stock is held now, the San Francisco mint, coining $1,000,000 a month, would take sixteen months to finish its stock. It would take the New Orleans mint twelve months to coin its stock at the same rate of speed. The balance of the bullion, amounting to 118,000,000 ounces, or, when coined, $150,000,000, is at the Philadelphia mint, and, unless an extra shift of men should be put to work, five years would be required to coin its stock and at the same time do such other work as occasion might require. As it costs $5 per thousand to carry silver from Philadelphia to New Orleans and $8 to San Francisco, the improbability of a transfer is easily appreciated.

MOBS HUNTING VICTIMS.

Negroes in Alabama in Great Fear of Being Lynched.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 17.—The negroes of Bullock county are terror-stricken. Recently Dud Carriek, railroad agent at Suspension, his clerk, William Hall, and Detective William Wallace have been assassinated, each crime quickly following the other, and the deeds are known to have been the work of a tough gang of negroes. In fact one crime was witnessed, but the negro escaped. Three negroes have been arrested and taken to Montgomery for safe keeping. Mobs bent on lynching watched for the officers, but the latter eluded them and got their prisoners safe to jail. Other negroes have fled the country for their lives.

BELOIT MAN WINS
A PRIZE IN ORATORYFRED STAFF WILL REPRESENT THE STATE.

His Oration, "A God On the Stage," Takes First Honors In the Inter State Contest—Fred Seldon, of Ripon Next, His Theme Being "God In History."

BELOIT, March 17.—The twenty-first annual contest of the Wisconsin Oratorical Association was held in the opera house in this city last night, its object being to determine what speaker would represent Wisconsin in the inter-state oratorical contest to be held in Indianapolis, in May. Beloit College was represented by Fred Staff, whose oration was "A God On the Stage," and A. E. Fraser, who reviewed the life of Edmund Burke; Ripon's delegates were Fred L. Seldon and H. L. Powers whose subjects were "God In History" and "The American Idea" respectively. The contest was a very close one, but was finally decided in favor of Fred Staff, of Beloit. Mr. Powers, of Ripon, holding second place. The judges were Dr. Wayland Hoyt, of Minneapolis; Prof. George Huntington, of Northfield, Minn.; Dr. Willard Scott, Chicago; Prof. T. C. Roney, Chicago; Rev. E. H. Pence, Janesville, and Hon. E. G. Sutherland, Milwaukee. A large number of students from Ripon accompanied their delegates, and a number of the fair "cousins" from Rockford college encouraged the boys with their presence. After the contest a banquet was tendered the visitors in Chapin hall. Delegates from Lawrence University were present at the contest and joined the association, and it was decided to hold the next state contest at Appleton.

IOWA FOR PROHIBITION.

Liquor Bills Defeated in Both Houses of the Legislature.

DES MOINES, March 17.—The Carpenter bill was defeated in the senate yesterday by a vote of yeas 12, nays 36. The consideration of the measure was resumed at 10 o'clock.

Senator Gronneweg offered as a substitute the democratic caucus measure providing for a license of $600 and regulating the business. Harper spoke for the democratic bill and then Finn offered his bill as a substitute. Finn's amendment was defeated and the democratic bill beaten by a party vote. Kilburn offered an amendment making the law apply to the smaller cities of the state without legalizing the business. This was defeated and the roll was called on the Carpenter bill, and it was defeated—yeas, 12; nays, 36; Finn moved to reconsider and Kelly to lay the reconsideration on the table. The latter motion was defeated and the senate adjourned.

Soon after the house convened the liquor bill was taken up, the pending question being the amendment requiring the signatures of 65 per cent of all men and women of the district before an election can be held to decide whether the sale of liquors shall be allowed. This was defeated, and then Martin moved that further consideration of the measure be postponed until next Wednesday. This in turn was defeated. Funk made a motion to place the bill on its passage. The vote resulted: Yeas, 43; nays, 57; and the bill was declared lost. Three members changed their votes against the bill in order to move a reconsideration.

TROUBLE AT SILK MILLS.

Deputy Sheriff Fires at a Mob—No One Seriously Injured.

EASTON, Pa., March 17.—While deputy sheriffs were escorting girls from the Standard silk mill at Phillipsburg to their homes after work last night, a crowd hooting and shouting "Scab!" and blowing tin horns followed them. At the corner of Fulton and Lewis streets a stone was thrown, striking Deputy Sheriff Keller in the face. Keller discharged his revolver at the crowd, which scattered and ran, but afterward formed and stoned the deputies. Policeman Steiner arrested Keller, disarming him, and placed him in the lockup, to which he was followed by an excited mob. He was liberated on bail. Keller is one of the foremen of the mill.

KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

One Dead, the Others Injured, and the House Is Wrecked.

DULUTH, Minn., March 17.—Edward Wagner, a German laborer living in the outskirts of the city, put three sticks of dynamite in the oven of the family cook stove to thaw out while he was at breakfast this morning. The house is now in ruins and the family in mourning. Otto Wagner, aged 13 years, was killed; Edward Wagner, slightly hurt; Mrs. Edward Wagner, fatally burned and bruised; Martha Wagner, aged 12 years, seriously cut and bruised; — Wagner, baby, aged 8 years, cut and bruised. The family is in destitute circumstances and the injured are being cared for by the county.

To Bring South and West Together.

WICHITA, Kan., March 17.—George W. Clement, president of the board of trade of this city, has issued a call for the south and west trade congress to be held in this city April 17. The object of the congress is to adopt ways and means to establish closer relations between the west and south and to devise means to facilitate the same.

HART IS NOW DEAD AND GONE
The Excitement Over the Rockford Hanging Has Died Down.

ROCKFORD, March 17.—The excitement over the hanging of John Hart has quieted down and the people have renewed their work again.

Hart's trial was finished Feb. 5 in Judge Shaw's court, and after being out an hour and twenty minutes the jury returned a verdict finding him guilty of murdering his two sisters, and fixing the penalty at death. Feb. 9 his attorney, J. C. Garver, argued a motion for a new trial, but the court overruled it and sentenced him to hang March 16.

Hart's crime was one of the most horrible and cold-blooded murders ever committed in this section of Illinois. With the utmost deliberation he planned the killing of his two younger sisters by way of revenge because they opposed the method in which he desired to divide the estate left by the father. According to the statement made by one of the girls on her deathbed, Hart lured Nellie into the barn cellar on the pretext that he wanted her to help him repair an oat bin. He knocked her to the ground and poured the poisonous mixture down her throat, and as she did not expire soon enough, finished the deed by clubbing her on the head until he thought she was dead.

Hart then walked to the house where his sister Mary was sitting on the porch, and fired a shot from a revolver at her. She grappled with him and made a desperate struggle for her life. The two fought for some time, Hart holding the revolver in his hand, waiting for a chance to give the girl her death blow. Twice more he fired, the bullets taking effect in the girl's breast. Hart was covered with the blood of his sister after the encounter and the floor of the porch and the walls of the house were like wise spattered. Officers at once set out to find Hart, who boldly came to Rockford, where he had supper and then went to a barber-shop to have his mustache shaved. Notwithstanding this attempt at disguise he was arrested before he left the place. Since his arrest he made two attempts to commit suicide, but was unsuccessful.

THE PEACE ARMY.

Fears of Disturbances Increase—Men Massing at Other Points.

MASSILLON, Ohio, March 17.—If all the unemployed in the United States do not assemble at Massillon to march on to Washington with Coney Easter Sunday it will not be the fault of the municipal authorities all along the line who are eager to proclaim the arrangements they have made to receive the army. In spite of many misrepresentations the truth is that there are no more tramps here than usual, and of the eleven discharged from the station-house yesterday morning not one knew about Coney or his movement. It is said they are massing at points near Massillon, intending to pour down on the city March 25.

Police Superintendent O'Meara of Pittsburg has already arranged to cooperate with authorities here and elsewhere and will send a large number of officers to Massillon to remain with the army and advise the home office in advance of the arrival of the commonweal.

Great apprehension exists here in spite of the present serenity. This could not be otherwise in view of the reports from East Liverpool and Homestead.

CIVIL WAR IN ASHLAND.

Chief of Police Schwartz Defies the Courts—Trouble Threatens.

ASHLAND, Wis., March 17.—The Ashland Water company sprung a surprise on Mayor O'Keefe and Chief of Police Schwartz yesterday by serving an injunction on them granted by Court Commissioner Stradling. It commands them to refrain from turning on the water again at houses which have been cut off by the water company for non-payment of the old rates. About 400 consumers are thus without water, they having relied on the expediency of Mayor O'Keefe's plans. Now Chief of Police Schwartz says he will violate the Circuit court injunction, even if it lands him in prison, and that is just where the commissioner says it will land him if he does violate it. The matter is at present in statu quo. The matter is growing hotter every minute and serious trouble is threatened.

Firebugs Burn a Mill.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., March 17.—The Jackson County Milling company's flour mill and elevator was destroyed by fire of incendiary origin at 10 o'clock last night. The total loss will amount to $30,000, partly covered by insurance.

CRIPPLE CREEK IS
THE SEAT OF WARSHERIFF CALLS FOR TROOPS TO REPEL STRIKERS.

Telephone and Telegraphic Lines Have Been Cut and Trouble May Begin At Any Moment—Soldiers Are On Their Way to the Scene of Action.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., March 17.—There is serious trouble in the Cripple Creek mining district. Sheriff Bowers has called for troops of the Colorado National guard to aid him in quelling the disturbances, and they are on the way to the camp, thirty miles distant. The telegraph and telephone wires have been cut. Strikers are making the trouble, which, it is thought, will break out first on Bull Hill. The sheriff says a couple of hundred men could easily overcome the watchman and small forces there. They would then march to Battle mountain, where a lively fight would be likely to occur. The Battle mountain miners are well armed.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., March 17.—It is reported that six deputy sheriffs were arrested and disarmed by the authorities at Aultman, a few miles from here, and that several hundred armed men are making threatening demonstrations against the miners who returned to work yesterday on the terms offered by the mine owners. All the saddle horses in town have been ordered by Sheriff Bowers and 100 deputy sheriffs will start for Aultman in a few minutes.

Fiery Talk at a Strikers' Meeting.

PATERSON, N. J., March 17.—A large mass meeting of the silk strikers was held in Apollo hall last night at which a number of fiery speeches were made and the police and manufacturers denounced in strong terms. The strikers were urged to stand firm and drive the manufacturers out of the city rather than be defeated or submit to the low scale of wages.

STORY OF MADELINE.

Plaintiff Testifies in the Celebrated Breach-of-Promise Case.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—After the lawyers in the Pollard-Breckinridge case had rustled their papers for a quarter of an hour yesterday there was a ripple of great surprise, for no less a personage than the plaintiff herself walked around to the witness stand, took a seat directly facing Col. Breckinridge and the whole roomful of men.

"When did Mr. Breckinridge meet you in 1892?" asked Mr. Carlisle.

"In one of the last days in August, 1892. He met me at the Baltimore & Ohio depot in Washington. He put both arms around me, kissed me, drew my arm through his and led me to a carriage. He told me that all his children had grown up; that he had determined to marry me, and I said I would marry him. He said he had married his second wife fourteen months after the death of his first wife and a year after the death of his second wife would not be too soon to marry me. I told him we ought not to marry for two years, and promised to go with Miss Willard on a school trip for young ladies in Europe. He said I must not go and leave him living in rooms, a thing he had not done for thirty years. He put it on the ground that I would be selfish to go, and I did not."

A letter dated Gray Gables, Buzzards Bay, Mass., in October, 1893, from Miss Catherine Willard, and which referred to the proposal that Miss Pollard should join the European party, was read to the jury.

Miss Pollard also testified concerning the birth of her second child in 1888, and recounted the numerous fashionable boarding houses in which she had been installed by Col. Breckinridge.

NEW YORK, March 17.—One of the sensations promised in the Pollard-Breckinridge breach-of-promise case at Washington and one that the Kentucky congressman's friends think will at least assist in throwing Miss Pollard's claim for $50,000 damages out of court was sprung in this city. It amounts to nothing less than official proof that Congressman Breckinridge had been married by a New York clergyman two weeks when, on May 13 of last year, he declared before the superintendent of police in Washington that he intended to marry Miss Pollard his wife on May 31.

Road and Men at Odds.

OMAHA, Neb., March 17.—Union Pacific employes have reached a standstill with Receiver Clark over the wage schedule, owing to his refusal to treat with any but engineers, firemen, trainmen and telegraphers. These organizations have notified the others that they insist upon the recognition of all before going further.

Isaac Prouty & Co. Go to the Wall.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 17.—The boot and shoe manufacturing firm of Isaac Prouty & Co. of Spencer, one of the biggest concerns of its kind in the country, has made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. Its factory employs 2,000 hands. No statement can be obtained of assets and liabilities.

MACHINE SAID "DO" SO THE BOYS "DID"

DENOCRATIC GEAR WHEELS WERE WELL GREASED.

The City Convention Was Very Unanimous, the Steerers Making All the Motions While the Delegates Fell On Themselves to Say "That's the Stuff."

City Treasurer.....MICHAEL MURPHY
City Attorney.....HORACE McELROY
Street Commissioner.....AUGUST LUTZ
School Com. at Large.....V. P. RICHARDSON
Justice of the Peace.....HENRY HEMMING

The machine ran things at the democratic city convention. The bosses had greased the gear wheels and there was no hitch in the program. The faithful knew that if they got their fingers in the cogs they would be minus a digit or two so they contented themselves with saying "rah!" at everything the ringmasters did. Each one of the "steerers" made two motions and everybody all voted "aye." Dr. O. P. Robinson was chairman and George H. Bates secretary. A ballot for city treasurer resulted like this:

M. Murphy.....59
F. C. Hasleton.....14
George H. Bates.....2

Total.....75

Victor Richardson moved that it be unanimous and it was.

Horace McElroy was nominated for city attorney by acclamation, and a ballot for street commissioner resulted as follows:

August Lutz.....50
F. W. Ryan.....19
Charles Horn.....4
Herman Shultz.....2

Total.....75

J. P. Baker said, "Make it unanimous," and they did. V. P. Richardson was named for school commissioner-at-large by acclamation, and Henry Hemming, who never studied law, was nominated for justice with one voice. The city committee was appointed in this order:

Chairman—O. P. Robinson.
First Ward—Frank S. Baines.
Second Ward—J. C. Zinck.
Third Ward—
Fourth Ward—John Casey.
Fifth Ward—Ald. Edward Smith.

Having thus served the country and the rulers thereof, the delegates pulled their hats down more firmly on their heads and left.

THE OPERA HOUSE RESTAURANT.

A Place Where the Inner Man Can Always Be Made Happy.

The Opera House restaurant in the opera house block, corner East Milwaukee and Bluff streets, Con McDonald proprietor, is constantly growing in public favor. Everything is done that could possibly be done to make customers feel at home. All the delicacies of the season are on hand at all times and as Mr. McDonald is one of the best cooks in the state, patrons feel assured that they will get something fine when they eat there.

Dozens of men find it to their advantage to take dinner down town now as they are always sure of a good one, and save their wives an immense amount of worry and trouble. On the second floor of the opera house block, Mr. McDonald has some very fine dining rooms, which are presided over by polite attendants, who will serve meals at all times. Such a restaurant as McDonald's is a great advantage to the city. Traveling men are good advertisers and they never hesitate to tell about the fine meal they had at "Conny's". This restaurant is open day and night, and customers can be served at all times. It fills the bill in every respect.

Ladies, Hats and Bonnets.

Of all things a woman likes the most about her dress is a hat. The bonnet also admire a handsome hat or bonnet on their sweet heart. The ladies of Janesville will soon have a chance to see the finest hats and bonnets ever exhibited in any city. Mrs. Woodstock, the leading milliner of Janesville, and her head trimmer, Miss Russell, have been east the past ten days, studying the new styles in ladies' head gear. Her immense stock is commencing to arrive. In a few days the ladies of Janesville will be able to get the most and correct styles ever known. Mrs. Woodstock proposes to do a larger business than ever this season and is making preparations accordingly. Don't place your order until she returns.

A parking shark was caught at Monterey, Cal., recently. The fish has been secured by the Stanford university for scientific purposes. The barking shark is, probably, the rarest species of its kind, and the British museum is said to make a standing offer of $1,000 for the skin of that fish.

In his last story Mark Twain tells of a young colored girl who "experienced religion" in a revival. The next day in dusting her master's desk she happened upon a two-dollar bill which had been left there by accident. "Lord-a-massy," she said as she covered it with a book so as not to be further tempted, "How I wish that revival ud been put off till tomorrow."

Mr. Charles B. Corey of Boston is tramping and punting about the swamps in the Banana river country, Florida, with a novel addition to a hunter's outfit. Venomous snakes, spiders and other such "varmints" are quite plentiful in that region, and give hunters much trouble, so Mr. Corey had made for us on the trip a pair of aluminum leggings. They are light, convenient to wear and a very comfortable safeguard. Mr. Corey got four bears on one trip last week.

VOTE BEGINS APR. 2 FOR THE PIANO.

GAZETTE MAKES A $450 OFFER TO ITS FRIENDS.

Each Day a Ballot Will Be Printed, and the Young Lady Whose Name Appears on the Most Blanks June 30 Will Get the Handsome Piano $450 Will Buy.

Some Janesville young lady will be given a $450 Shaw piano free July 1. Now everybody listen.

A $450 piano means as fine a piano as anybody in Janesville owns. And that is just the kind The Gazette means.

S. C. Burnham & Co. testify to the quality of the instrument. It is from them that the instrument is bought, and in their show window it will be displayed. By next Wednesday it will probably be in place, as it is now on way from the east, having been erected two weeks ago.

A valuable prize has never been offered by a Wisconsin newspaper. By April 2 copies of The Gazette will be 'way above par.

The only limit to be imposed is that the young lady who wins the piano must be one who provides for her own support. Teacher, clerk, typewriter, milliner, dressmaker, book-keeper, it is all one, so long as she maintains herself by her own efforts.

How will the winner be named, do you ask?

By ballot. A coupon will be printed in the Gazette each night from April 2 until the contest closes.

Rules of the Contest.

1. Any one, anywhere in any state is entitled to vote as often as they buy a copy of The Janesville Gazette containing the above ballot.

2. Cut the ballot out (trimming on the dotted lines) Write in the name of your candidate and enclose same in an envelope addressed to Ballot Editor, Gazette, Janesville, Wis.

3. Only one person can be voted for on one ballot.

4. A ballot Monday April 2 the ballot will be printed in the Gazette every day.

5. The lady who receives the largest number of votes will receive as good and beautiful a piano as the Shaw Piano Company can make.

6. The contest will close June 30, 1894. Piano will be delivered as soon as the counting of votes is completed.

7. Any person who will bring The Gazette a new subscriber paid in advance will be entitled to the following number of ballots:

New subscriber paid in advance one month, 100 votes.

New subscriber paid in advance two months, 250 votes.

New subscriber paid in advance six months, 900 votes.

New subscriber paid in advance one year, 2,000 votes.

Each new subscriber who pays in advance and casts the number of votes specified is also entitled, of course, to cut coupons from the paper from day to day and vote in the regular manner.

No person will be allowed extra votes for stopping his paper and having it sent to another name at the same address.

In every instance they must be bona fide new subscribers.

We will be square with you, you must be square with us. No person will be allowed to stop his paper on Monday and start it again Tuesday and claim the premium offered.

The polls will close at 9:00 p. m., June 30, but votes handed in before this will be duly credited. The contest will be conducted strictly "on the square." No partiality or unfair advantage will be taken or allowed in any case.

NEVER WENT TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

Forty-Six Children In The Second Ward Do Not Attend.

The Union Sunday School mission-ary, John H. Leas, has visited the people of Second ward, and has found fifty-six children that are not interested in Sunday school work, but have promised him that they will from this time be found in the several Sunday Schools of this city. He is now engaged in the Third ward canvas.

THIEVES GOT CASH AND CLOTHES

Lima House Entered By Burglars And Twenty-One Dollars Taken.

John H. Godfrey's house in Lima was entered by thieves and a pocket book containing $21 was taken, also an overcoat, a pair of boots and a pair of shoes. No trace of the missing articles have been found, with the exception of the pocket book with some receipts, which was found by the section hands on the railroad track between Milton and Lima.

An Affectionate Tale.

Barber—Poor Jim has been sent to an insane asylum.

Victim (in chair)—Who's Jim?

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been brooding over the hard times an' I suppose he finally got crazy."

"Hum! Not unlikely."

"Yes, he and me has worked side by side for years and we were so alike we couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded a good deal, too. No money in this business anymore."

"What's the matter with it?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo or something it doesn't pay to shave or hair-cut. Poor Jim! I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, and so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me very melancholy. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let him slash all he wanted to. He might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Y-e-s, sir."—N. Y. Weekly.

A VICTIM OF HARD TIMES.

"When I last met you, if I am not mistaken, you had an exceedingly heavy beard."

"Just so—just so; had it cut off four months ago and made into a shoulder-cape for my wife. See?"—Harper's Bazar.

A Well-Grounded Belief.

Yabsley—A man of your sense ought to know better than to be so superstitious. What is there in the number thirteen that should make it any unluckier than any other? You can't show a single instance to support your belief.

Mudge—I can't, eh? Where are the people who lived in the thirteenth century? Every last one of them is dead.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Necessary Qualification.

Superintendent of Insane Asylum—That man there is the most complete idiot in the institution. He knows absolutely nothing.

Railway Official—He is just the man we have been looking for. I should like to employ him.

Superintendent—Employ him! For what?

Official—To invent new ways of folding our time tables.—Truth.

She Objected.

"Mr. Courty asked me to marry him last night," she blushing told her mother.

"And what did you tell him?"

"I told him to ask you."

"Ask me?" echoed the startled parent. "Why, Mary, surely you wouldn't have your dear old mother commit bigamy, would you?"—Atlanta Constitution.

There's No Such Thing.

Maude—We had private theatricals last evening. They went off first rate, only the folks would laugh at the wrong place.

Uncle Henry—There is no such thing, Maude, as laughing in the wrong place in private theatricals.—Boston Transcript.

That oily and rough skin cured and the face and hands beautified by Johnson's Oriental soap; medicated and highly perfumed. Sold at Smith's Pharmacy.

CITY SCHOOL NEWS IN BRIEF CHIPS

MADISON SUPERINTENDENT VISITS THE CITY.

Prof. Dudgeon Pleased With the Work Done But Disappointed at the Quarters the City Provides—Many Teachers Go to the Southwestern Wisconsin Meeting.

Superintendent Dudgeon, of Madison, was in the city Thursday visiting schools. The school board of Madison has set aside $100 a year for the purpose of enabling the superintendent to visit other schools. Mr. Dudgeon spoke very highly of the grade of work he saw here, but he thinks our high school has completely outgrown its quarters.

A large number of the city teachers are planning to attend the Southern Wisconsin Teachers' Association at Milwaukee next week. An exceptionally interesting programme has been prepared, bearing on all phases of school work. One afternoon will be given up entirely to roundtable work in which all can take part.

Superintendent Mayne returned from Platteville Thursday, where he went as one of the board of visitors to inspect the normal school. While there he attended his sister's wedding.

Professor Layton will give a fifteen minute address before the high school next Thursday on a subject pertaining to his profession. The professor will illustrate his talk by giving some selections of instrumental music.

The White Sewing Machine Company presented the high school with 230 copies of a very neat and tasteful song book this week. That book contains a choice collection of the old songs that have lived through the period of copyright. Many of the national airs are also contained in it.

Trainers (to collector)—I'm sorry I can't settle your account, but I've just had a tombstone put over my grandmother's grave, and it leaves me a little short.

Office Boy (interrupting)—There's a man outside to see you, sir.

Trainers—Well, what does he want?

Office Boy—He wants to collect the bill for a tombstone.—Brooklyn Life.

She Knew It.

Teacher (to class)—Can anyone tell me why the lyre-bird is so named?

Silence reigned for quite a time, when a little five-year-old eagerly raised her hand.

Teacher—Well, what is it, May?

May—Ain't it because he tells such awful lies?—Harper's Young People.

Where Women's Taste Fails.

Manes—I believe Tom intends to retire from the world and live in seclusion permanently.

Taylor—What makes you think that?

Manes—I just overheard him tell his wife that she might buy his next supply of neckties for him.—Chicago Record.

A Serious Derangement.

Physician—Don't look so downcast, my friend. Brace up and let's see what I can do for you. Why do you think your mind is in danger?

Patient—I don't think I know. I attended a farce comedy last night and laughed at the jokes.—Chicago Record.

Could Pick Her Friends.

Little Ethel—I wish I could get acquainted with Susie Sweet, but I can't. She's awful exclusive.

Mother—Exclusive? Why, I never even heard of the family.

Little Ethel—Didn't you? Her mother keeps a candy stand.—Good News.

Graceful Anyhow.

Gus—What do you girls do at your Conversation club—just sit around and stare at each other and talk?

Clara—No, indeed. We play whist.

To Mend Table Linen.

A housekeeper, in the Albany Cultivator, advises that flax embroidery floss of a fineness corresponding with the thread of the cloth be used. Under the ragged edge of the tear or the thin, worn place that will soon become a hole if left to itself haste a piece of stiff writing paper. Then make a network of fine stitches back and forth over its edges, running them an inch beyond the edges of the cut. Cross again with "one thread up and one thread down" darning stitches, and the cloth will have a new lease of life. If the place is not so thin as to be almost a hole, simply run with the flax one way. Towels and napkins may be mended in the same way.

THE FRENCH BALLET AND ITS GLORIES.

PICTURES FROM NEW ORLEANS OLD FRENCH OPERA HOUSE.

The Rehearsal Takes All the Romance from the Pretty Chorus Girl—When Not Made Up for Public Gaze the Women Are Supremely Ugly-Looking.

THE OLD FRENCH Opera house in New Orleans is a very busy establishment just now, especially in the day time. There are continual rehearsals on the stage, the office is full of voluble Parisian artists of one sort or another, and work is going on the greenrooms of the armorer, the property woman, the perruquier, and all the other department headquarters. The big troupe of grand opera folk, comic opera singers, chorus people, figurantes and ballet dancers is nearly all made up of Parisians, and whether it is because they are strangers in the half French city, or whether it is because the truly love the arts they follow, the fact remains that they fairly live in the opera house. One does not wonder at seeing the whole 150 persons on the down there. It comprises a premiere, two secondes danseuses, four quadrilles, and a lot of figurantes. The faces of the girls have set masculine hearts to pit-a-patting in Marseilles, in Brussels, and in Paris itself. The ballet practice room is just over the very large foyer and is an apartment of the same size. Its floor would be bare but for two bits of furniture—a piano and a hand rail for the girls to stretch their muscles upon. Perhaps the director's walking stick should be included as the third appointment of the room. It is as big as any man would want for a cudgel, and it has a bent handle so that it can be hung on the director's arm whenever he rushes into the company of dancing girls to take one by the shoulders and force her to do well whatever she has been caught doing clumsily.

The director stands beside a piano on which a musician is playing. The four quadrilles of dancers dispose themselves in two long lines before him. He pounds the time of the music on the bare board floor; thump-thump-thump-thump-thump-thump, until it would seem that his arm would be paralyzed. The softly slipped feet of the girls make no noise, but if they did it would have to be as loud as a succession of pistol shots to be heard above the outrageous din of that walking stick. It is the equal of the noise a carpenter would make if he were nailing down floor boards. The girls are rehearsing in old dresses that have grown too far from white to be worn on the stage—the usual manifold skirts of stiffly distended tulle. As the room is cold and no outsiders are looked for there, each dancer has put some sort of extra covering over her bare arms and neck. There are little jackets and long coats and worsted guernseys in the motley collection. And they all wear trousers in the bargain, instead of the mere trunks that now are hidden underneath this rehearsal dress. The trousers are all alike and are of the zouave pattern, very full and loose all over, and buttoned above the knee, whence they fall in a little roll around the leg. They seem to be made of Canton flannel, and are worn "with the hairy side in," like the famous coat of Brian O'Linn. There is no mystery about these trousers.

It is a thing destructive of poetry and illusion, this visit to the practice room of the ballet. The girls are nearly all beautiful. Their faces are the visages of young girls of plump cheek, creamy in tone, flawless and perfect. From toes to crown the ballet seems the incarnation of immaculate neatness, spirit, and intellectuality and physical perfection combined. One was a young mother. A grand dame in the audience pointed her out to me as the possessor of a baby only a month old. She had been out of the ballet a few days, and then had returned like a nymph of Bouguereau, all in fleecy white and rosy pink, tripping along in tiny white slippers, held by a few dainty white silk ribbons criss-crossed in front of her little ankles. Here at the rehearsal were the same sturdy and shapely legs as the ballet boasted on Sunday—the same twinkling, springing columns of steel-like muscle encased in pink silk, but the faces are now those of women well along in life, and far from being pretty, these are coarse and rough. The young mother whose motherhood is such a trifle to her, turns out to be a low-browed, pock-marked girl, although she does dance like a rubber ball.

While the girls are one-two-threeing up and down and around and to and fro, the secondes are practicing at the hand rail. These secondes are the princesses who precede and attend the queen of the ballet—the premiere. They are of a higher grade of womanhood than the others. Whether they are better born, or are improved by better wages and surroundings, who knows? They are now working the muscles of their legs, though their legs are so very large and their arms are so very slender one would have thought they would deal more fairly by their bodies by using dumb bells or clubs to develop their upper stories. They are beautifully dressed. Their pink silk tights glow and shine; their trousers are white and new, and both wear pretty flannel jackets, that of one being snow-white, of the other red and white in stripes. The polished hand rail separates them. Each rests a hand on it and stands on one toe. Now one puts her heel on the bar, which is on a line with her chest, and, next, the other one matches it with her heel, as if they were playing a game. Sedately and persistently they continue this action, stretching the muscles of one leg and the other. In the course of a quarter of an hour one leaves the rail and whirls across the room, spinning from foot to foot, on her toes, with one set cramped on the floor and the other set marking parabolas in the air. The other works on at the rail for a while, and then she, too, leaves it and sweeps around the room on her toes, with her hands up over her head, her arms shaving a varland above her. The recalls what Mme. Cavallazzi once said to the writer:

"Once a year I go to my home in the country in England, and I walk and fish and ride with my husband. It is the only fun I have, and it lasts a month. For that month I pay with agony when I return to my work and have to bring my muscles back to dancing condition. Ah! that is supreme torture." EDWARD SCOVILLE.

IN THE EVENING.

THE RING

George Dixon and Young Griffo, the Australian boxer, have been matched to fight to a finish for $5,000 a side and the largest purse that may be hung up by any responsible club.

Cal McCarthy was knocked out in the opening round of a glove bout with Fred Precious, a 108-lb lad, in Birmingham recently.

Thomas Cribb, a grandson of the celebrated Tom Cribb, committed suicide in London, Eng., recently.

The Supreme court at New Orleans has reversed the finding of the jury in the case of the state against the Olympic club, for the forfeiture of their charter, and the club will be put in a receiver's hands to wind up its affairs.

Jack Kerwin knocked out Jack Davis in the eighth round of a glove contest near North Baltimore, Ohio, recently.

George Siddons and Danny Russell, the latter of Bridgeport, Conn., have been matched to fight with gloves for a purse of $500 on or about March 1. The men are to weigh in at 126 lbs.

Ever since a Louisville woman saw some mummies in the Anthropological exhibition at the exposition she thinks she is 1,500 years old, and she has just been put in the insane asylum now. She is worth $20,000, too.

Mrs. Annie L. Kirk died in Cecil county, Maryland, the other day at the age of 103, and was in sound health nearly to the day of her death. She was of Irish birth, but had long lived in Cecil county, where her husband was a miller.

PARTISAN UNFAIRNESS.

One of the over-zealous workers in the judicial campaign has written a letter to himself asking if more than one of Judge Bennett's decision was ever reversed by the supreme court, and then ingeniously gone on to answer it, giving a list of sixty-eight matters which the supreme court, during twelve years, has overruled and published it in the Recorder. The writer meant to be malicious and unfair, and to create a false impression that the decisions of Judge Bennett had not stood well the test of review by the supreme court; but, in publishing the result of his researches he has unwittingly given the very strongest testimony to the singular ability with which the judge has decided the questions that have come before him since he has been upon the bench. During these twelve years many thousands of cases have been decided by Judge Bennett in all the counties of this circuit, and many hundreds of them have been appealed; and no one knows better than the man who wrote that article that in endeavoring to convey the impression to the public that Judge Bennett's decisions were not good law, and that any large percentage of them had been reversed, that he was doing something dishonest and unfair.

The fact is, as every lawyer in the circuit knows, that no circuit judge in the state stands higher than does Judge Bennett, and no circuit judge's opinions have been better upheld by our supreme court. Indeed, in a very recent case, which the letter-writer in the Recorder failed to say anything about, the supreme court paid Judge Bennett the very unusual honor to any circuit judge of a compliment upon the ability with which he had decided the case, in the course of which they say: "The remarks of the court were the very clear, cogent and conclusive reasons given by the court for granting the motion. The reasons given by the court were able, exhaustive and satisfactory in ruling upon a new and very important question, and were very suggestive to this court."

There ought to be fairness even in politics, and in a judicial campaign there should be the least excuse for trickery. And the use of such political mendacity as is shown in the article referred to, is something which the gentleman opposing Judge Bennett ought not to permit.

A CREDITABLE ISSUE.

Some few weeks ago The Gazette decided to issue during the year a series of holiday editions, that would be novel in appearance and a credit to the office and the city. All the plans were made, and Washington's birthday was selected for the first number, but it was soon found that the time was too short to make the venture profitable, and so the first number appears to-day. The management will be pardoned for saying that in many respects the paper is the best edition ever issued from a Janesville office. Other special issues will follow from time to time, including a "Bower City Trade Edition" which will include a complete showing of the wholesale and retail industries of the city. An effort will be made to have each issue better than the one which preceded it. During 1894 the Gazette will be worth watching.

The republican tariff policy was never more tersely stated than in the national platform of 1892—"that on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home."

"No protection for republican states," seems to have been kept in mind by the senatorial tariff bill revisers.

The sugarcrats appear to outnumber the democrats in the senate.

A NERVOUS WOMAN.

WHAT SHE THOUGHT ABOUT NERVES.

The nerves are the most important part of the system. If they are weak, the person is run down, tired, languid and does not feel like doing anything. She can sleep but little, her mind wanders, her appetite is gone and what she can eat does her no good. This is just the condition Mrs. Milo Griffith, a well known lady of Moretown, Vt., found herself in and the reader will see by the following letter that she knew what to do to get well.

"About seven years ago," she says, "I was taken with a very severe nervousness and could not work. I could but just drag around. I also had the asthma badly. I was so nervous that at times I could not lay in the house but felt as though I must go out in the street and run."

"I had no appetite, and what I did eat laid heavily on my stomach and sometimes distressed me severely. I had seen Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy advertised and heard it most highly praised, and determined at once to take this medicine which was so favorably spoken of by everybody. I had only taken it a short time when I began to feel the good results from it, and I am now entirely cured of my complaints."

MRS. MILO GRIFFITH.

"I was so confined to the house that I could not go out evenings at all to any amusements, but now can go when I please. When I commenced to take the medicine I weighed 96 pounds and now have got back to 132 pounds. I coughed and wheezed so that I would almost fall down."

"Nobody could suffer any more than I did, but now my nervousness and asthma are entirely cured and the medicine that did it was Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I eat and sleep well and do my housework as comfortably as ever. I heartily recommend the Nervura to all. It is the most wonderful medicine I ever found."

There are thousands of women suffering just as Mrs. Griffith was. They are so nervous they cannot control themselves, they have no power to throw off that terrible down-hearted, discontented feeling and many feel as though they would go insane. Are you afflicted in this way? If so you will surely be cured by using Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is the most wonderful medicine in the world to cure disease, and it is just what you want.

The spring is always the best time to take this medicine. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter, at his office, 35 West 14th street New York City.

SOME WELL KNOWN FACES.

From Roustabout to Mayor.

John P. Hopkins, the new mayor of Chicago and the youngest man who ever held that office in the city, was born in Buffalo about 36 years ago and received but a common school education. His father was a poor man, and John's first employment in Chicago was shoving lumber in the Pullman company's yards. His advance, however, was rapid, and in 1885 he was paymaster of the Pullman company. He has always taken more or less interest in local politics and has been president of the Cook county Democracy for several years. Mr. Hopkins is now a well to do man, his money being all invested in the business where it has been made.

Bank Officers Indicted.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 17.—The decision of the Supreme court yesterday overruling the decision of Judge Johnson in squashing the indictments against the Plankinton Bank officials makes valid sixty-two indictments of two grand juries which stand against some of Milwaukee's most prominent citizens. The men were all indicted for receiving deposits at the South side and Plankinton banks after they knew those institutions to be insolvent.

OLD JANESVILLE MAN DEAD.

John E. Babcock Passed Away in Towanda, Pa. Aged 74 Years.

John E. Babcock died in Towanda, Pa. March 14, 1894, aged seventy-four years. He was a brother of Mrs. J. D. Rexford of this city, and came to Janesville with his family from Norwich, N. Y. in the autumn of 1853, having purchased the interest of J. B. Doe in the mercantile firm of J. B. Doe & Cooley. A little later Sylvester Foord, Jr., bought the interest of Mr. Cooley. The firm of Babcock & Foord occupied the store then standing on the site of the First National Bank until the ground was needed for the erection of the bank building. Thereafter they occupied a store in the Hyatt house block, until the spring of 1858, when he returned to his eastern home. Mr. Babcock and his wife were active members of Trinity Episcopal church, and will be pleasantly remembered by many early settlers of Janesville. She died about twenty years ago.

Death of Patrick Cantillon.

Patrick Cantillon died at his home on North Hickory street this morning aged about sixty-nine years. Mr. Cantillon had resided in Janesville for forty years, and leaves beside his wife a family of eight children, six sons and two daughters.

Janesville Should be Proud.

Don't lay this issue aside without reading the introductory advertisement of the Dr. McChesney Co. This company has leased the Windsor Hotel building and will occupy it April 1, as a sanitarium and private hospital. Every effort is being made to make it one of the foremost institutions of the kind in the west. Able and efficient physicians will be in attendance, who will be capable of treating any disease known to the human anatomy. The forty rooms in the building will be utilized and Janesville will be better known than ever before. Hunt up the introductory announcement on another page and get full information.

Keeping His Credit.

"There's only one reason, old man, why I protest against the proposed income tax."

"Only one reason, eh?"

"Yes. You see, my kicking makes people think I have an income."—Brooklyn Life.

A Larger Class.

WHOLE TOWN GREEN FOR ST. PATRICK

PATRON SAINT OF THE EMERALD ISLE HONORED.

Marched Under the Stars and Stripes As Well As the Sunburst of Erin To the Time of Celtic Airs—Services at the Church—Concert Tonight.

Stars and stripes on the right. Green and gold on the left. Under these two flags Janesville Irishmen marched this morning. Green rosettes showed on black chapeaux; green insignia bisected black coats; but the American flag had the place of honor—on the right. It was in honor of St. Patrick that the demonstration was made. Green is his memory with Irishmen; green is the tribute they pay him. John W. Hogan acted as chief marshal with Daniel Ryan as his assistant. Behind them came the Bower City Band, and as a coincidence their uniforms, too, were green. A patriotic air of the Emerald Isle swelled forth into the air as the procession started on the corner of East Milwaukee and Main streets. Division No. 1 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians were drawn up in line, their lodge room being Liberty Hall. As the band came around the corner the society fell in behind and marched up Milwaukee street. At Columbia hall Division No. 3 joined the procession and they all marched to St. Patrick's church.

Music Was Fine.

The crowd trooped into the church and filled it to overflowing. Every seat was taken and the aisles were filled with people who stood up. An eloquent sermon by Rev. Father Murphy of Watertown, was listened to with attention, Father Murphy outlining the life and work of St. Patrick in a lucid and entertaining way. Millard's Mass in C was sung; Miss Mary Riley had a solo, "St. Patrick's Day," and D. D. Bennett sang "Veni Creator" in a pleasing manner. Miss Sarah Hickey played the organ in an accomplished manner, and the band also furnished music. Tonight the day's events will close with a concert at Columbia hall in which Smith's orchestra, with Miss Sarah Hickey at the piano, will take part; the program, being made up as follows:

Overture.....Smith's Orchestra.
Opening Address.....Dean E. M. McGinnity.
Vocal Quartette.....Selected Amphion Quartette.
Vocal Solo....."Erin's Isle" Mrs. Harry Keating.
Essay....."Oliver Cromwell" Mrs. James Whittaker.
Vocal Solo....."The Girl Left Behind" Charles C. Cunningham.
Vocal Solo....."Come Back to Erin" Mrs. James M. Finley.
Piano Duette....."Neck and Neck" Misses Mattie and Kittie Crowley.
Vocal Solo....."Annie O' the Moy" Miss Mary Riley.
Address....."Justice to Ireland" Rev. P. C. O'Brien, Chicago.
Vocal Quartette.....Selected Amphion Quartette.
Recitation....."An Irish Soldier's Ode to Miss Columbia" Miss Susie A. Rowe, Kenosha.
Vocal Solo....."The Irish Are True" Miss Kathryn Morrissey.
Vocal Quartette.....Selected Amphion Quartette.
Chorus....."God Save Ireland" By the audience.

MISS O'NEIL of Archie Reid's millinery department is back from a ten days' stay in the eastern markets and as the usual result that this popular department will show unquestionably the largest and most complete array of fine millinery in the city. Liberal purchases from the noted French importer, Leon Rheims, of New York City, will enable a great showing of exclusive novelties not to be seen elsewhere.

Riverside Laundry Merits Success.

Well dressed people in this city are becoming more numerous every day and high grade laundry work is appreciated. Much of the excellent work that is seen comes from the Riverside Steam Laundry under the Merchant and Mechanics bank. Mr. Stanton, the proprietor, guarantees every article that leaves his laundry. He does not cut prices and then slight the work to make up for it. The prices charged are moderate, and the work done the best in the city. Ever since the day the Riverside opened their business has steadily increased and today Mr. Stanton can boast of one of the largest laundry business in the state. All goods called for and delivered, and once you patronize this institution you will always return. "The best work" is their motto.

Handsome Millinery.

Miss Lizzie Kennedy has just returned from the eastern markets where she has been for several days studying the latest fashions in millinery. While east Miss Kennedy purchased a stock millinery and ladies furnishing goods that when received and opened will be the finest ever shown in Janesville. The Misses Kennedy will in a few days have their stock open and ready for inspection. Their handsome millinery establishment in the hotel Myers block will soon present a very enticing appearance. The latest styles will all be shown there next week.

Johnson's Oriental soap is the most delicate facial soap for ladies in existence. Sold at Smith's Pharmacy.

ANOTHER OFFER TO INTEREST LADIES.

SOMETHING OF VALUE TO THE GAZETTE'S FRIENDS.

Demorests Patterns Free—The Gazette to Give Them Away to Subscribers Watch for the Coupon Which Entitles You to This Prize—How the Plan Works.

Now here is something for the ladies:

The Gazette has completed arrangements with W. Jennings Demorest, publisher of the famous patterns and also publisher of Demorests Magazine, by which subscribers to the Gazette will be enabled to obtain any of Demorests' patterns at a nominal expense.

Within a few days the Gazette will publish the picture of one of Demorests' patterns accompanied by a description of the same and will also publish a coupon. This coupon cut from the paper and sent to New York, accompanied by four stamps in postage stamps or money (for postage on the patterns and expense of sending on the order) will procure for subscribers to this paper a pattern of the garment illustrated. All of Demorests' patterns will be subject to this offer and as none cost less than 25 cents and range from that figure to 50 cents it will be seen that this offer means a great saving for the Gazette subscribers.

This offer is of especial value just at present, as so many ladies who usually have their dresses made are economizing by making them themselves.

The Best Dressmakers Use Them.

There is a great deal in having the endorsement of practical business people for any article which is offered to the public. The patterns which The Gazette is now offering through its new coupon system have been endorsed not only by the heads of thousands of families throughout the country for a great number of years, but by most of the leading dressmakers of the United States. These people do not use a pattern because it has a fancy reputation, but because they have tested it in comparison with others offered them and found it superior to their purposes. The competition of business compels them to look for the best patterns that can be obtained, because they have to depend upon the superior styles of their garments for sales and they could not afford to use anything but the best.

These patterns are sought by all dressmakers who aim to earn or retain a high reputation for originality and accuracy of either fit or style. Consequently they are the best that money can buy. The fact that we offer these patterns for a trifling sum in connection with a coupon clipped from our columns only shows what enterprise can do, for similar patterns cannot be purchased in the ordinary way for many times the price we supply them to our readers.

The coupons for these patterns will appear in The Gazette one each week. Watch for them and get new styles on very easy terms.

A Handsome Window.

A person in business is always catering to the masses and whenever a holiday of any kind is at hand the live business man utilizes it and caters to the people who are celebrating the day. Today is St. Patrick's day. Efforts are being made on all sides to cater to those celebrating this day. As one passes along the principal streets of the city, different exhibitions will greet your eye in the different windows, all bordering on the green. Among the most handsome windows we have seen today is that of J. D. Holmes, the tailor man on the bridge. It is a true representation of the shamrock, and all that pertains to make a handsome and attractive display. Holmes, the tailor man, is ever up to the times, and never lets an opportunity pass without showing his enterprise. He has now on hand all the latest in new spring suitings and pants. Also all the new style hats, neckwear and everything that goes to make a good looking gentleman appear more handsome. Holmes, the tailor man, is the people's friend. His efforts deserve success. His window should be seen to be appreciated.

NO BASIS FOR "INDEPENDENT" CRY

Republican Reviews the City Treasurership Canvass—Fathers Should Win

EDITOR GAZETTE:—The course taken by Mr. Murphy in refusing to abide by the action of the city caucuses is a surprise to his friends and supporters, and a fulfillment of the prophecies of those who supported another candidate. We have heard for years that Mr. Murphy was a republican "for revenue only" and that as soon as the test came it would be demonstrated. Many of us have denied this, and vouch for his sturdy republicanism. His conduct confounds his friends and pleases his enemies. The only excuse given by him for refusing to abide by the action of the caucus is so perfectly false and so silly as to render it supremely ridiculous. He says that he believes the action of the caucus was not an expression of the republican party. The history of the republican party does not furnish another such expression of republican sentiment in the last twenty-five years. The action of the general government in its policy of substituting soup-houses for manufacturing establishments and of the state administration in its attempt to rob the state treasury, together with the industrious work of the candidates, all combined to arouse republicans and they were out in force. It was believed by many that the "independent candidate" business was simply preliminary to the action of the democratic convention, and that Mr. Murphy having worked the republican party as long as he could, will now work the democratic party. It is a little strange that, after having been honored by the republican party as Mr. Murphy has, that now when democrats are flocking to the republican fold, he should leave his honored place with the republican party, and seek a place in a party disgraced and dishonored in nation and state.

A Gift.

One summer day, in early June, I found myself in a garden sweet—Surrounded with flowers of every kind; Above my head, beneath my feet, From the sweetest of them all to me— I gathered a bunch, my love, for thee.

I sent them to her in a dainty box, With cotton moist; I wrapt their stems. The offer of my love I left inside For her who would tenderly unfold the zone.

How I wished I might have been near her there As she looked at the flowers, and read my prayer. ABIE A. FORD.

The American Flag.

On the fourth page of this issue will be found a large advertisement of Weisend, the clothier and merchant tailor. Mr. Weisend has adopted the American flag as his trademark. The flag will be kept flying from his place of business all the time, and when you see it you will at once know that it is the place to get your clothing and furnishing goods. Mr. Weisend's merchant tailoring establishment is becoming very popular.

R. B. HAYES' FORMER HOME.

THE OLD HAYES HOME AS SEEN TO-DAY.

Rutherford B. Hayes, the Oldest Son of the Ex-President, Now the Only One of the Family Enjoying Its Quiet Seclusion—The Hayes Family.

THE RUTHERFORD B. HAYES house at Fremont, Ohio, is the home of but one member of the family, Rutherford, who is in business in Fremont, and has bachelor quarters in the house. The fine old homestead is occupied by a family, not as tenants, but as caretakers. The other children seldom go there. Miss Fannie Hayes, the only daughter, is in Paris, Richard, the eldest son, is in Toledo. Webb Hayes, and his brother Scott, who was the baby of the Hayes family, are both in Cleveland. The five children were all gathered at the house for the funeral of the ex-President in January last, and a few months before that at the obsequies of their mother.

The homestead is known as "Spiegel Grove," and is located barely within the limits of the town. The house stands in the center of a grove wherein the woodman's ax has not yet sounded, save to beautify. There are several acres surrounding the house. The property was an inheritance which fell to the ex-President FANNIE HAYES, from his uncle, Sardis Birchard, a pioneer of Sandusky county, whose wealth, for northwestern Ohio, was great, and whose admiration of his nephew was unbounded.

"Spiegel Grove" belongs to the Hayes children equally. Their father's will bequeathed it to them with the wish that it always be held by them as common property. When Mrs. Hayes died the house was in process of enlargement under her direction. She had a warm love of young people, and in her lifetime Spiegel Grove was always a happy place, full of joyful young men and women. The house nowadays has an atmosphere of gloom.

The visitor can almost read the history of Hayes' career from the pictures encountered at every step. In the wide hallway is the portrait of Sardis Birchard, the original owner and Hayes' uncle. On the frame of this picture hangs the old crook-handled cane which Sardis Birchard placed there years ago when he came in complaining of illness and took to his bed, never again going out alive. Near by is a picture of Mrs. Hayes, made when she was a girl of sixteen. Then she was Lucy Ware Webb, a school girl at Delaware, Ohio, which was the birthplace of Hayes and the place where she first met him.

The curtains in the parlor are covered with a collection of badges gathered from political conventions, from G. A. R. reunions, and ceremonies of various kinds in all parts of the country. When the ex-President was lying in his coffin, the funeral attendants wanted to place upon his breast the badge he had cherished most—the plain bronze and tri-color of the Grand Army. A search revealed it among the thousands of badges on the curtains. It was transferred to his breast along with that of the Loyal Legion, of which he was national commander.

Both Gen. Hayes and his wife were autograph collectors. He was especially interested in signatures or bits of sentiment written by public men with whom he was familiar, and his autograph pages, now carefully preserved, are very valuable. Mrs. Hayes cared most for autograph bits of verse from the poets of all lands, but mostly from those of her own. Many of the lines written in her album refer to her reign in the white house. For instance, George W. Cable touches on her temperance ideas in the following couplet:

That woman's hand that puts away the cup
Is fair as Joan's with the sword lift up.

In this library is the manuscript of a book which the ex-President had in preparation. It was intended as a personal history of his career, and as a refutation of political slanders, particularly those bearing on the famous electoral commission and the Hayes-Tilden contest. Whether it was finished or not, or when, if ever, it is to be published, his family and intimate friends will not say. His search for official documents bearing on the case led to the knowledge that he had such a work in preparation.

Birchard Hayes, the eldest son, born forty years ago in Cincinnati when his father was city solicitor, is now a successful lawyer in Toledo. He was a student at Cornell when the father was President, and, after graduation, entered the law.

Mrs. Birchard Hayes was Miss Mary Sherman of Norwalk, Ohio, and is a piece of the Otis brothers, millionaires of Chicago.

Birchard Hayes is a law partner of the Swayne brothers, sons of Justice Noah H. Swayne, and brothers of Gen. Wager Swayne of New York.

Webb Cook Hayes, the second son, will be 38 years old in March. He is fond of society, but also intensely fond of business, and has resisted all matrimonial attacks. He was at Cornell, but did not graduate, as he preferred active business to professional life. He has taken part at times in political conventions. He devotes himself to electrical pursuits, and stands high in that branch of business. He is general manager of the National Carbon company in Cleveland, and for a long Electric company.

Rutherford Platt Hayes is now 35, and also a bachelor. He has always been at home, and, though a traveler, has never cared to engage in business elsewhere. He was graduated from Cornell. For years he has been cashier of the Fremont Savings bank, of which his father was until his death a director. "Rud" Hayes is one of the most genial and polite men alive, and has no old-maidish ideas or prejudices. He is extremely careful with the funds of the bank, and doesn't understand how bank robberies should occur. His favorite diversion is amateur photography, but he never has his own picture taken.

Miss Fannie Hayes is 26 years of age and was born during her father's first campaign for governor of Ohio.

Scott Hayes, the youngest child, was born at Columbus in 1871 while his father was governor. He was quite a boy and full of harmless mischief when in the white house, and was constantly the playmate of his sister Fannie. He grew up looking more like his mother than any of the others, and, being the baby, was probably the most petted. It did not seem to spoil time was with the Thomson-Houston him, however. He left Cornell, with his parents' protest and became an electrician.

THE ART OF PRESSING.
Amateur Dressmakers Advised to Patronize the Tailor's Goose—How to Press.

"Next to neatly finished details," remarked a famous dressmaker, "there is nothing that distinguishes amateur work from professional more than the pressing. Most people only press their goods when they consider that certain portions or seams require it, whereas the tailor holds his goose of as much importance as his shears or needle and shapes his garments with a sponge and hot iron—quite as much with the former as the latter. This is particularly applicable to cloth garments."

Any one who is ambitious of having good work done in her house by her seamstress should have the proper appliances. According to the New York Tribune, a broad board made of hard wood, smoothly planed, is essential, and it should be covered with a woolen cloth of a firm, smooth texture, similar to broadcloth. A tailor's goose and a "French iron," which is better for a certain class of work, should be kept as the exclusive property of the seamstress, and it goes without saying that they should always be in the highest state of cleanliness and polish.

In pressing seams it is better to use the flat end of the iron rather than the point, as the latter is apt to produce tiny wrinkles on either side of the seam. The greatest care should be taken to avoid such wrinkles, which are very apt to appear in the outside fabric, and if they are once pressed in it is almost impossible to wholly erase them. Sometimes in pressing cloth the iron will leave a shiny mark. When this is the case, take a wet cloth which has been well wrung out, lay it over the place and lay a hot iron on it, lifting it immediately. Then give it a brush with a whisk broom, and the gloss will disappear.

HOPE FOR THE HAIRLESS.
Professor Birkholz, of Chicago, Gives Hope to Those Afflicted with Baldness—A "No Cure, No Pay" Treatment.

Professor G. Birkholz, of Chicago, the eminent German specialist, who for years has devoted his time and talent to the study of the hair follicles, and who has evolved the most successful treatment for baldness the world has ever known.

He will carefully examine each case and candidly inform the inquirer whether his baldness can be cured and the hair be restored. These examinations are made without charge.

In all cases where there are any hair follicles remaining undestroyed by age or disease the professor will undertake a cure, and if he does not effect a restoration of the hair he will ask no pay.

The remedy is an imported one, and the treatment given by the professor is his own, and cures where all others fail. If your case has been pronounced incurable do not take it as a final answer until you have seen Professor Birkholz and received his opinion.

Many persons have small bald spots through the hair. These increase in area and in time produce baldness. In such cases the hair follicles need nourishment. Prompt treatment will bring them into activity and restore the hair.

The success that has attended Professor Birkholz everywhere enables him to give a positive opinion in each case presented to him. Those who are bald or are threatened with baldness should not delay treatment, but call upon the professor at once. 1011 Masonic Temple Chicago.

Hand this notice to any first-class drug agent and he will get the remedy for you at once, if he has not got it in stock.

BRIEF POINTS ON
FANCY NEEDLE WORKDAISY WORK IS POPULAR, QUICKLY
EXECUTED AND INEXPENSIVE.Ordinary Dotted Muslin is the Foundation of This Effective Work—The Designs Are Embroidered in Washing Silks or Fast Colored Cottons.Daisy work recommends itself to those who like what can be very quickly executed and which costs little. It has an other charm, and that is that it is easy to do. Ordinary dotted muslin is the foundation of this pretty work, and the best quality is none too good. Daisy work

A DAISY PATTERN.

may also be done for different uses on spotted ribbon or sateen as well as on muslin and can of course be thus adapted for many different purposes. It will redeem an ordinary material without making it absurd by elaborate work. It is particularly a pretty finish for country
couch or hammock pillows made of sateen and even for a finishing border to children's frocks and aprons.In either silk of some spotted design or in muslin over silk or sateen this work is appropriate for nightdress sachets.
Some are made in the shape of the "crackers" with which all party going children are familiar. Each end may be gathered in with a ribbon or finished by a rosette, and the nightdress goes in through a slit down the middle. The case is of course stuffed with wool or wadding. Small tea cloths can be similarly made, and so may inexpensive little coverings for baby's cot, the maker using her own discretion in adding elaborate linings or full frills of lace.Several attractive designs of this daisy work are furnished in The Housewife, which gives the following directions and explanations: Never pull the thread; never let the muslin pucker; never carry the silk from one spot to another. Use only washing silks or fast colored cotton, for whatever is worth doing is worth doing well. Spending one's time on fancy work that will not last is not doing well.In the first design the spots on the muslin are treated exactly like daisies,
the pattern being so simple that it needs no explanation. The second pattern is especially designed for curtains or toilet articles. The original was done in red

CROSSES AND FRENCH KNOTS.

crosses, with a yellow French knot in the middle. The stitch for the cross is picot stitch. Every spot has also a yellow French knot.The French knot is made, as almost every one knows, by twisting the thread around the needle one or more times and then replacing the needle in almost the same spot. This gives a delicate little point of color very effective in many instances.

Caring For a Cold.

Pneumonia, pleurisy and consumption are partners of carelessness in the dressing of the chest and back, and the colds, which might stop at the throat by a little prudence, are their apprentices. To get relief from a cold, in the first place avoid too much medication. A properly clad skin and a clear digestion ought to shorten the life of a cold. If a little comfort can be secured by wearing a light covering on the head during indoor hours, it should be respected. Ventilation of apartments comes in for a slight amount of attention, and it should be sufficient to furnish fresh air and not to produce currents.Nothing is more fallacious than the belief that health is promoted and life prolonged by air in excess. There are a few good remedies which appeal to us as matters of tradition. Our grandparents used them with effect, and we might follow their example without injury. One of these is sassafras tea. Another is boneset tea, and another is senna tea.
Each has its office, says the New York
Ledger, and each is of value in its peculiar line, and at the same time is entirely harmless.

Hard Work to Spell It.

At a spelling school entertainment at Mineral Point, every person in the contest was caught on the word
"supersede."

"Sedately" Once More.

"I hope things are more peaceful in the choir than formerly," said the pastor."Yes, sir," replied the organist; "it's perfectly calm now.""I'm glad to hear it. How was peace secured?""Everybody excepting myself resigned,"—Washington Star.Lesbia forever on me rains:
To talk of me she never fails.
Now, hang me, but for all her art,
I find that I have gained her heart.My proof is this: I plainly see
The case is just the same with me:
I curse her every hour sincerely,
Yet, hang me, but I love her dearly.
—Dean Swift.

The Heights of Kings.

In the resting place of the old kings of Denmark, the cathedral of Roskilde, a recent visitor notes that there is a column against which a number of monarchs have been measured, and upon which their different heights are recorded. One of them is Peter the Great, and we learn by this means that the shipwright czar measured no less than eighty Danish inches, equivalent to something like six feet ten inches in our measurement. Only one other of the sovereigns was taller, and that was Christian I. of Denmark, who, according to this authority, was just a trifle over seven feet English. The czar, Alexander III., is about six feet one inch and is about a couple of inches taller than Christian IX.
of Denmark, and about four inches taller than King George of Greece, neither of whom, nevertheless, is what would be called a short man.
It is worth noting that in the same ancient cathedral where this column is to be seen Saxo Grammaticus, the Danish historian from whom Shakespeare borrowed practically the entire plot of "Hamlet," lies buried.

Transient Islands of the Pacific.

The Western Pacific is a great place for islands that emerge from waves unexpectedly and suddenly disappear. Sometimes they come up and stay, but more often they have an existence merely temporary. The wondering skipper misses a familiar landmark, by which he has been accustomed to get his bearings, and perhaps the next day he runs his vessel's nose upon a brand new piece of territory that has sprung up out of the water since he last came that way. The region south of Japan is so given to that sort of eccentricity that ships avoid it. Volcanic action is responsible for such phenomena.
Reports of them will be noted on the pilot chart in every case, though they are not always reliable, because backs of sleeping whales and schools of fish running along the surface are frequently taken for islands and shoals.—San Francisco Examiner.

NED LEHANE'S WIFE WAS WON BY A SACK GROOMTIED IN A BAG AT THE ALTAR.

Story For March 17 By Rob F. Walsh
—How St. Patrick Was Relied Upon to Save the Widow Molyneux
From a Very Unpleasant Perdicament.

mine host told me the following romance
of two of his parishioners:

On the roadside, close to one of the entrances to Roche's hotel, there is a small cottage which at that time was occupied by the Widow Regan and her daughter Minnie. Minnie was the peasant belle of the district. She had a superb figure, wondrous wavy brown hair and, as the song says, "Irish skies were in her eyes." From beneath great curling dark lashes those blue-gray eyes of hers shot many a glance of danger to the hearts of Glengarriffe's swains.

Among the latter was Ned Lehane, the village carpenter and jaunting car owner. He was a manly fellow, but his courage was an unknown quantity when it came to making love to the fair Minnie—to whom he was passionately devoted. Nor was our heroine unconscious of Ned's affection. With true womanly instinct she divined his love for her, and for some reason Minnie returned his affection in the same secret, bashful manner.

There came a suitor for Minnie's hand whose methods of lovemaking were most unromantic. He did not woo with honeyed words and phrases. He knew that he was unacceptable to her, but he loved her with a grasping, passionate love, and he determined that she should be his wife. He wooed her with gold in one hand and a writ of eviction in the other. He was the agent of the estate, and as Mrs. Regan owed two "half gals" (one year's rent) and another would be due on the twenty-fifth of March, he said in a cold, defiant manner that chilled poor Minnie's heart:

"If you don't marry me, Minnie, I'll put ye out on Patrick's Day."

"Shure, ye can't do that, Mr. Pratt, for the rint won't be due till the twenty-fifth."

"Can't I though? I have the writ in me pocket now, my colleen."

And then he produced the document and continued:

"There it is; but if ye'll only say the word, Minnie, I'll burn it. Shure, y'r not sparkin' with any man, an' I'll give ye a fine, decent home. Come now, don't make me put ye out."

"I can't marry ye, Mr. Pratt, so plaze don't come botherin' me again. I can't help it if ye put us out, and perhaps some of the neighbors'll take care of us."

"Very well, girl. Very well. 'Tis a nice daughter you are to see your poor old mother thrown upon the charity of the neighbors."

"How dare you!" cried Minnie. "I can work for whatever little bite she aces."

At this juncture the widow joined them, and to her Pratt coldbloodedly explained his terms—Minnie or eviction.

The poor woman's eyes filled with tears. The terror of eviction bewildered her, but the bargain was loathsome to her Irish mother's heart and she said:

"Give us time, sir—a couple o' days—an' we'll see what we can do."

"Very well, ma'am! But remember that if Minnie doesn't marry me on Patrick's Day, out you go. I'll call again tomorrow."

The two women went to their little home heartbroken. Minnie now loathed the man who claimed her for a wife, but she read the tortured heart of her mother; she feared that eviction might mean death to her, and, crushing her own agony, she said:

"Mother, I think 'tis God's will. I'll marry him."

"Wisha, God bless you, child. 'Tis a quare way he has o' makin' love, but they say he's not so bad a man as some of the agents. An shure you'll always have plinty, an' I'll die in the ould house."

Poor Minnie was unprepared for this instant acceptance of her sacrifice, but she loved her mother devotedly, and burying her grief she next day promised to become Mrs. Pratt.

The news flew through the village like a pestilence, carrying with it death to the hopes of many an eligible young fellow. But to Ned Lehane it acted like a sunstroke. The poor fellow was utterly prostrated, and his mother declared to more than one neighbor that she feared his brain was affected.

So matters went on until St. Patrick's morning. Then a strange ray of hope came into Ned's heart, and it was the more strange because it was the day that Pratt had fixed for Minnie to sign her promise to marry him. But the strategy of an Irish lover is proverbial, and Ned divined a peculiarly original plan to win his love at the very altar.

As Father Molyneux's home was several miles from Glengarriffe, and he was too poor to enjoy the luxury of a horse and car, Ned drove over for him every Sunday and holiday morning. And it was during this drive that, on the Patrick's morning in question, Ned unfolded to him his love for Minnie and his plan to win her from the agent.

"And why didn't you speak to her before?" asked the priest.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY MARCH 17TH

The Prayer Before Tara.
Christ, as a light,
illumine and guide me!
Christ, as a shield,
Overshadow and cover me!
Christ, be over me!
Christ, be beside me!
On left hand and right!
Christ, be before me,
Behind me, about me!
Christ, this day,
Be within and without me!

Christ, be over me!
Christ, be beside me!
On left hand and right!
Christ, be before me,
Behind me, about me!
Christ, this day,
Be within and without me!

"Begor, your reverence, I hadn't the courage."

Father Molyneux laughed and said:

"And how do you propose to win her from Pratt, Ned? If the girl likes him, it isn't likely she'd give him up for you!"

"But I know she doesn't like him, sir."

"How do you know?"

"Wisha, I can't tell ye, your reverence; but as sure as the ould mare is in front of us I believe she hates him."

"And I dare say, from the same reasoning, you believe she loves yourself?"

"Begor, ye have it, sir. That's just it. This amused the priest intensely, but he was very much attached to both Minnie and Ned, so he inquired again:

"Well, what do you propose to do?"

"I was thinkin', sir, that whin your reverence would ask the question, that I could answer it instead of Pratt."

"And then he blessed her, and Minnie went out from the sacristy happier than she had been for many a day."

Minnie, fortified by the words of the priest, signed the promise to marry him that Pratt insisted upon, and on Easter Tuesday the wedding was arranged to take place.

At seven o'clock in the evening of that day Father Molyneux went to the Widow Regan's house to tie the knot. Pratt was beaming with delight. Minnie was nervously happy in anticipation of the event which the priest had hinted on Patrick's Day, and her good humor pleased the bridegroom-expectant very much. But Ned Lehane was also an invited guest, and so was Maurice Flynn, and these two young men were very busy over the arrangement of a strange looking bundle that Maurice had hidden under his greatcoat.

But now it was the time for action. The priest had opened the book and Minnie and Mr. Pratt were bidden to stand up beside him. All went on quite smoothly until the priest came to the part of the service where he asks, "Will you take this woman for your lawful nie, I want to have a talk with you."

And still sobbing, she followed him.

When they arrived in this room, away from the curious and gossiping neighbors, he said abruptly:

"Tell me, Minnie, do you love Ned Lehane?"

The poor girl's white face became crimson with blushes, but she did not reply.

"Why don't you answer me, child? Come, now, tell me everything. Do you truly love Ned, and would you marry him if it was so arranged?"

Timidly the young girl looked at him through her great lashes, and she replied:

"I would, father."

"Very well, child. He will be at the wedding. I don't know how he means to do it; but don't be surprised if you are made Mrs. Lehane instead of Mrs. Pratt. And now go to mass, child, and pray to Saint Patrick to help you."

And then he blessed her, and Minnie went out from the sacristy happier than she had been for many a day.

"You can't mind a broken egg, Mr. Pratt," interjected the widow, who had now realized the situation, and who on the whole felt pleased with the arrangements which Father Molyneux explained to her. But Pratt was furious, and left the cottage to procure his writ of eviction and a few bailiffs.

When he came back not a vestige of the wedding party was visible, nor of the widow's furniture. Ned and Maurice Flynn had carts in readiness to remove them, and to the agent's intense mortification he found, nailed to the door, a piece of paper upon which was written: "Saint Patrick has taken Mrs. Regan home. Goodby, Mr. Pratt."

LEAVES FROM HISTORY OF THE THIRTIES.

The Financial Depression of That Period Led to Bitter Attacks on the Hero of New Orleans—Hard Times Coins.

THE HARD TIMES coins, or tokens, as they are called, of 1834 and the seven or eight following years, tell an interesting story of the great commercial crisis of that period, which is in some way paralleled by the present financial troubles. Gen. Andrew Jackson was the most hated man of those times, if these bits of metal reflected popular feeling, and history says they did.

They took the place of the political cartoons of the present day, a very crude medium through which bitter partisan spirit found vent. The chief executive of the nation was pictured as a jackass, again as a bawky mule, and there are sarcastic references to "my experiment," "my currency" and "my glory," and in other ways he was subjected to ridicule.

All these rude imitations of legal coinage passed current as money for years, originating during President

Jackson's relentless fight on the United States bank. This bank was chartered in 1816, and was to run twenty years. It encountered no opposition until Gen. Jackson became President, in 1829. In January, 1832, a petition for a new charter was presented to congress, which was granted, but was vetoed by the President. Against the administration were arrayed the great capitalists, the leading business men and the smaller bankers. The personal popularity of Jackson carried the day and won him the victory in the campaign of 1832. When it came to a vote, many who were bitterly hostile to the old hero's policy regarding the bank ranged themselves on his side.

Jackson's latest attack on the bank was made a year later, when he ordered the removal of the government deposits, and this was done. The deposits were placed in state banks throughout the country. It was during the exciting period of financial distress which followed that these tokens were issued.

A hog running at full speed ornaments one satirical piece. The inscription on the same side reads: "Perish credit, perish commerce, 1830. My victory, my third heat. Down with the bank." On the reverse side is a small bust of Gen. Jackson, and the words, "My substitute for the United States bank. My experiment. My currency, my glory."

"My third heat" refers to the President's third message to congress relating to the bank, and by placing the words on the hog his, whig enemies doubtless wanted to show his obstinacy and pigheadedness.

A full-length figure of the hero of New Orleans and a bawky mule are the devices which balance each other on another token. On the obverse is a mule bawking inscribed "L. L. D." and the words "The Constitution as I understand it. Roman firmness, 1834."

On the back is a rude figure of Jackson holding in his left hand a large and pithoric purse, which he defends with a sword in his right. Surrounding this device are the words: "A plain system void of pomp." The letters on the mule refer to the degree conferred on Jackson by Harvard university in 1832. The motto: "The constitution as I understand it," is taken from Jackson's second inaugural address.

Another token pictures Jackson sitting on a treasure chest with the same money bag and sword in his hands. On the reverse side a jackass takes the place of the mule on the other piece, perhaps showing the degree of asininity which "Old Hickory" was assuming in the eyes of his antagonists.

The friends of Jackson also issued tokens in retaliation. One bears on the obverse a profile of the general, and on the back is the legend, "The bank must perish," and the famous quotation from Jackson's nullification proclamation, "The Union must and shall be preserved!"

A copper token, struck in 1837, during Van Buren's administration, has on its obverse a tortoise bearing the sub-treasury safe, indicating the slow progress of the sub-treasury scheme which Jackson had advocated and which was strongly indorsed by Van Buren. The inscription is: "Executive experiment, sub-treasury (on the safe), fiscal agent, 1837." On the back is a galloping jackass and the sentence, "I follow in the footsteps of my illustrious predecessor."

There was another series of tokens belonging to this period of national distress—the store cards or business advertisements. Tradesmen announced themselves as anti-bank hatters and hard-money bakers, and in various ways indicated their political preferences and feelings, though they were not always of a political character. The tokens circulated as money to some extent and were usually designed to enrich the issuer's pocket.

In Childhood's Happy Days.

Among the incidents of childhood that stand out in bold relief, as our memory reverts to the days when we were young, none are more prominent than severe sickness. The young mother vividly remembers that it was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured her of croup, and in turn administers it to her own offspring and always with the best results. For sale by Stearns & Baker, Druggists.

Try It.

For a lame back or a pain in the side or chest, try saturating a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and binding it onto the affected parts. This treatment will cure any ordinary case in one or two days. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. 50 cent bottles for sale by Stearns & Baker.

The Silkworm's Rival.

A new competitor of the silkworm has been found on the Dalmatian coast, according to a report of the French consulate in Trieste. This is the bombyx lasiocampa otus. The moth of this is similar to that of the silkworm, but the cocoon is much larger, and the silk finer and snow white. The worm feeds on the leaves of the evergreen quercus ilex. Experiments are being made with the intent of raising this newly discovered worm for commercial purposes.

GERMANY'S GRAND OLD MAN.

Prince Bismarck Still the Idol of the German People.

The reconciliation of Prince Bismarck with the Emperor of Germany is the most picturesque incident of recent political history. It is scarcely, as it seems to be regarded in some quarters, an affair of international importance, but the fact that it is so considered is at once a tribute to the genius, and a recognition of the commanding statesmanship of the man who for a decade and a half dominated European politics. It must be said, too, that whatever may have been the motive of the emperor in seeking this reconciliation—whether it was inspired by a desire to strengthen himself with the disaffected following of the prince or by a conviction that he has been unjust and ungrateful in his treatment of the creator of the empire—his action is alike wise and worthy of a great and powerful sovereign.

No event for many years has occasioned greater popular enthusiasm throughout Germany than the prince's visit to Berlin on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the emperor's entrance into the army, and more recently the latter's visit to the prince. The whole city was en fete, and thousands of visitors from all parts of the country hastened to the capital to participate in the ovation to the first citizen of the empire. His official reception was marked by the most distinguished honors, not only the emperor and his immediate suite, but a splendid retinue of kings and princes uniting in the welcome. The procession which escorted the prince to the palace passed through streets gay with decorations and crowded with enthusiastic multitudes. At the palace old and intimate friends, statesmen, generals, the picked men of the realm, met him with affectionate

LATEST PORTRAIT OF PRINCE BISMARCK. greetings. It was his day of vindication—a vindication unduly deferred, but complete and full at last. A great life, a career of loyal and abundant service, could have no grander climax, no brighter crown, than this which has come to Bismarck in the deepening twilight of his days.

"Look at me," said Cholly's father, indignantly. "I don't waste my time as you do. I work every day of my life except Sunday. And Cholly almost shed a tear as he answered. "I know it. And it's the wettest of my life that we can't send you to some place whee they'll cure you of the beastly habit."

"Your great men seem to carry their honors most easily, said the ob-servant foreigner. "I have met several of your senators, and they seem just as common as anyone." "That may be the case with senators," replied the citizen, "but you just ought to meet a newly-elected justice of the peace."

"Yes, children, we are bound to resist the tempter however often he may approach us. I went into a butcher's shop once when I was an apprentice. I was very hungry and had no money. The tramp had got into the kitchen where a bountiful repast of second-hand victuals was spread before him, the lady of the house standing by. "Is that all for me?" he asked, looking over it greedily. "Every bit of it," said the lady encouragingly. "Kin I eat it or take it away with me?" "It's yours to dispose of as you please." "Thank ye, mum," he said, rising and bowing. "I'd like to sell it to you for a quarter in cash."

A Valuable Dog.

When Sheridan was a manager, he even indulged in such catering to the public taste as offering to the public a dog piece, by Reynolds, entitled, "The Caravan, or the Driver and His Dog." Of its first presentation it is recorded that Sheridan, after witnessing the performance, suddenly entered the green room, shouting: "Where is he? Where is my guardian angel?" Presuming he meant to congratulate the author, Reynolds replied: "Here I am?" "Pooh," replied Sheridan, "I don't mean you; I mean the dog." Later, one Dignum, who played in the piece, approached Sheridan one night, with woeful countenance, saying: "Sir, there is no guarding against illness. It is truly lamentable to stop the run of a successful play like this; but really—" "Really what?" cried Sheridan, interrupting him. "I am so unwell that I can not go on longer than tonight." "You!" exclaimed Sheridan; "my good fellow, you terrified me; I thought you were going to say the dog was ill."—Argonaut.

Sable Island.

Sable island is famous throughout the Canadian maritime provinces for its race of wild ponies. The little creatures were originally placed upon the island in order that they might furnish food for shipwrecked mariners frequently cast away there. The coarse salt grass of the island is cured and stacked in summer time, and upon this the ponies feed all winter. It is said that they eat their way deep into the stacks and thus find their only shelter from the storms. There is a tradition current that they even eat fish cast upon the shore. Considerable droves of the ponies are taken to the mainland in early autumn, and they are sold in the Halifax market.

An Electric Railway.

ALL THESE PEOPLE LOOK FOR GHOSTS

Objects of the Brooklyn Psychical Research Society.

TO INVESTIGATE APPARITIONS.

An Interview With the President of the Society—He Believes in the Existence of Earthbound Spirits—The Power of Prophecy—Abraham Lincoln's Warning.

The Brooklyn Psychical Research society, recently incorporated, was, like its namesakes in Boston and London, organized for the purpose of hunting and investigating ghosts and ghost stories—a pursuit which seems more and more to engage the interest of speculative minds. Dr. John C. Wyman, who has long been an enthusiastic student of occult and spiritualistic literature, is president of the Brooklyn society. In an interview published in the New York Herald he defines the sphere of the organization as follows:

"The particular business and objects of this society will be to impartially investigate all psychic phenomena, to thoroughly study psychic science and all correlated sciences and practically apply them to the betterment of human life and environments, also to enter upon the consideration, discussion and practical application of the principles involved in social, psychological, scientific, religious and spiritual subjects generally."

The reporter asked Dr. Wyman whether he believed that the spirits of the dead may actually frequent their former abodes or places familiar to them in life and so appear as to make themselves manifest to the human senses—to the eyes and the ears of living beings.

"I certainly do believe that there are many well authenticated cases of such manifestations. My belief is that there are certain spirits, which we designate as 'earth bound spirits,' which must necessarily frequent certain earthly places. In doing so they may be re-enacting momentous events in their own lives and may doubtless also make themselves manifest to the human senses in various ways. While far from haunted houses, I am therefore by no means a scoffer at well substantiated reports of such phenomena."

The reporter inquired of Dr. Wyman whether he or other members of the Psychic Research society believed in the power of prevision or foreknowledge sometimes attributed to certain peculiarly gifted persons, and whether he believed that forewarnings and prophecies were ever conveyed to mortal intelligence through the medium of dreams and visions.

"As to that," he replied, "I can state that many prophecies have been made to me during the past 20 years through several different psychics, nearly all of which have been fulfilled almost to the letter."

"I have personally known of friends whose lives have been saved by obeying the intuitions or warnings given to them impressionally. Others were saved from accident and some from terrible deaths by railroad and steamboat disasters by hearing a voice or by being warned through advice given to them by psychics, which bade them beware taking a journey on a certain day by a special train or steamer."

"Many well authenticated cases are on record where these warnings were not heeded, and accidents, disasters and deaths have occurred in fulfillment of the predictions made."

"The same thing is true of dreams and visions. Perhaps one of the most interesting is connected with the assassination of our martyred president, Abraham Lincoln. The facts are these, as related to Mrs. Lincoln and other friends present at the time by Mr. Lincoln himself:

"About 10 days ago I retired very late. I had been waiting for important dispatches. I could not have been long in bed when I fell into a slumber and began to dream. There seemed to be a deathlike stillness about me. Then I heard subdued sobs, as if a number of persons were weeping. I thought I left my bed and wandered down stairs. There the silence was broken by the same sobbing, but no mourners were visible. I went from room to room. No living person was in sight, but the mournful sounds met me as I passed along. I was puzzled and alarmed. What could be the meaning of all this?"

"Determined to find out the cause of a state of things so mysterious, I kept on until I arrived at the end room, which I entered. There I met a sickening surprise. Before me was a catafalque, on which rested a corpse wrapped in funeral vestments. Around it were stationed soldiers, who were acting as guards. And there was a throng of people, some gazing mournfully upon this corpse, whose face was covered, others weeping pitifully."

"Who is dead at the White House?" I demanded of one of the soldiers.

"The president," was his answer. "He was killed by an assassin."

"Then came a loud burst of grief from the crowd, which awoke me from my dream. I slept no more that night, and although it was only a dream I have been strangely annoyed by it ever since."

"Had the president, his wife and friends heeded the warning his life might have been spared. The realm of psychology, psychic science and psychic phenomena is crowded to repletion with valuable discovered facts and incidents, well worthy of the attention of all progressive and liberal thinkers, because the study of these occult matters reveals principles and laws, the knowledge of which is exceedingly important as related to the welfare of humanity."

"Our society now numbers about 50 of the most intelligent, moral and progressive men and women of Brooklyn, and we expect a large and rapid accession to our ranks from among cultured liberal thinkers."

AMPLE PROOF OF OWNERSHIP.

A Woman Satisfied a Baggage-man as to the Identity of a Trunk.

It was at the baggage-rooms in the Fort street depot, says the Detroit Free Press. The woman had lost the check for her trunk, and as is usual in such cases where no suspicion is entertained she was asked to identify her baggage.

"Oh, I can pick that trunk out of a thousand. It was a zinc covered trunk, with a strap around it, and it had a big W. for White on each end. It was a trunk my sister bought in Cincinnati and paid $6 for, and after she got crippled up with rheumatism, and couldn't get out any more she sold to me for $2. There it is now! I'd swear to that trunk in Africa!"

"But about the contents ma'am. You have the key?"

"Of course I have. I had this key made in Buffalo last week. I lost the other key about a year ago, and I always believed that Mrs. Robinson's baby swallowed it while I was there visiting. The poor thing had cramps for three months after I left, and she wrote me the other day that she never expected it would be a healthy child again."

"Describe the contents," said the officer, as he pulled the trunk down.

"Well, let me see. We'll begin with the till first. There's my bonnet in the bonnet box. I paid $7 for it in Buffalo last year, and had over $2 worth of trimming put on last week. I don't know as I shall want to wear it once while here, but I thought I'd better bring it along. I was never quite satisfied with that bonnet but I suppose—"

"What else?" interrupted the man.

"There's a black fan which cost me ninety-nine cents. I got it at a sale and everybody says it was a bargain. My sister Emily was with me when I bought it, and she could swear to it if necessary. She advised me to get a white fan, but I prefer—"

"I don't care about the particulars, ma'am."

"Oh, don't you? Well, there's a black shawl in there which used to belong to my Aunt Eunice. She had it for ten years before she died, and then it fell to my mother. Let's see. That shawl must have been in our family for—"

"Go on, ma'am."

"Then, there's my black silk dress. I paid $1.50 a yard for it in Buffalo, but I got cheated. I hadn't worn it but twice when the silk cracked and creased all up. I went back and told the clerk of it, but he wouldn't do anything about it. Next time I buy a silk dress I propose—"

"Never mind about the dress."

"The waist was beaded."

"I don't care about that."

"Well, let's see. Oh, yes; on the bottom of the trunk are four sheets I was bringing to my sister. I made 'em and bleached 'em myself. She's got four boys, and the way they kick the sheets out is something awful. I don't suppose I could have brought her anything she would—"

"What else?"

"There's a pair of gray pants on top the sheets—an old pair belonging to my husband. They are worn a little thin on the knees, but they will do to cut over for one of the boys. I've brought up three boys myself, and I know how awful they are on pants. Sometimes it wouldn't be four weeks before—"

"You can have the trunk!" bluntly replied the baggage-man.

"But there's a lot more things to mention yet. There's three pairs of new—"

"Take it away!"

"Well, I'll have a man take it away. I lost my check and I wanted to satisfy you it was my trunk. If you'd give me time I'd tell you about a coat with a fur collar and two pairs of suspenders for the boys, and—"

The baggage-master walked off, and after waiting around two or three minutes with a disappointed and dejected look she sorrowfully told the expressman to carry the trunk to his wagon.

I am an old man and have been a constant sufferer with catarrh for the last ten years. I am entirely cured by the use of Ely's Cream Balm. It is strange that so simple a remedy will cure such a stubborn disease.—Henry Billings, U. S. Pension Att'y, Washington, D. C.

For eight years I have suffered from catarrh, which affected my eyes and hearing; have employed many physicians without relief. I am now on my second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and feel confident of a complete cure.—Mary C. Thompson, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

For Over Fifty Years, MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all drug lists throughout the world.

Damasus gave to the world damask linen and the Damson plum.

Coffee is so called from being first brought to Europe from Caffa.

The total value of the crops of the United States during 1892 is estimated at $3,000,000,000, of which the largest item is $750,000,000 worth of hay.

As a leaper the kangaroo is ahead of all. It readily jumps from sixty to seventy feet. A horse has jumped thirty-seven feet and a man twenty-five feet six and one-half inches.

Growing blackberries and mushrooms, by law, are not private property in England. One may be prosecuted for trespassing on land where they grow, but not for taking them.

In Denmark the value of real estate has increased £192,000,000 in thirty-seven years. This is due to the breaking up of the large estates of the nobility and their purchase by the peasantry.

ST. PATRICK'S LIFE AN EVENTFUL ONE.

of christian faith. He made many converts on the spot, and the sermon and controversy in Tara's halls, was an auspicious beginning for the glorious mission upon which he had entered.

Neither time nor space will permit us to follow the saint in his progress through the island; now preaching in the kingly halls, and blessing the golden vales of Munster; now fasting and going into retreat on Croagh-Patrick amid the wild, rocky beauty of Connaught; and again laboring where first we met him, amid the picturesque scenes and the green hills of Ulster. Suffice it to say that before his death the good seeds had been sown, and the cross had been raised "from the center to the sea."

Tradition tells us that in expounding the doctrine of the Blessed Trinity, he plucked from the sod a little sprig of trefoil or three leaved grass, whence the shamrock "the Irishman's shamrock," comes to be the national emblem of Ireland.

In the year of our Lord, 493, on the 17th of March, St. Patrick departed this life in his favorite retreat of Saul in the county of Down, where his body was interred.

O Glorious Apostle and Father of the Irish people, well may thy children venerate and love thee; well may they sing in the gratitude of their hearts.

Thou hast been to us light, when earth's lights were all dead. For the glories of faith, they can never decay; And the best of our glories is bright with us yet In the faith and the feast of St. Patrick's day.

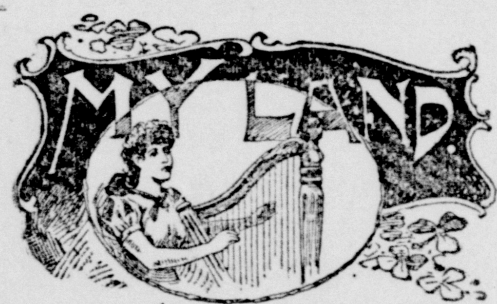

IONA.

Best of Them All.

"Col. Brown," remarked a chap-ple, "is the finest after-dinner speaker I know of."

"Why," said his friend, in some astonishment. "I never heard he had any ability in that direction at all."

"Well, he has; I've dined with him several times at various places, and after dinner he always says: 'That's all right, my boy, I'll pay for it.'"

She is a rich and rare land;
Oh, she's a fresh and fair land;
She is a dear and rare land—
This native land of mine.

No men than hers are braver—
Her women's hearts ne'er waver;
I'd freely die to save her
And think my lot divine.

She's not a dull or cold land—
Not she's a warm and bold land;
Oh, she's a true and old land—
This native land of mine.

Could beauty ever guard her,
And virtue still reward her,
No foe could cross her border,
No friend within it pine.

Oh, she's a fresh and fair land!
Oh, she's a true and rare land!
Yes, she's a rare and fair land—
This native land of mine.

—Thomas Davis.

DEAN SWIFT OUTWITTED.

His Servant Was All Irish and the Dean Only Half.

The famous Dean Swift, though of English blood, had absorbed a good deal of the Irish nature—especially in the line of wit and humor. Many are the anecdotes of his talks with his Irish servant, Tricky as the young fellow was, the dean found he was honest and dependable, so he took him into his service.

Once, when they were setting out on a journey, the dean saw that his boots were not polished, and he spoke of it. "Oh," says the servant, "what 'ud be the use of polishing? They would be as spattered as ever before night." "Oh, very well." They were after riding seven or eight miles and were passing a house of entertainment. "Master," says the boy, "don't you think it time to get breakfast?" "Ach, what use would it be? We'd be as hungry as ever before sunset." There the boy was circumvented anyway. He said nothing, but kept riding after his master, dismal enough. The dean, to vex him the more, took out a book and began to read, jogging on easy.

By and by a gentleman met them. He touched his hat to the dean, and when he came near the boy asked him the name of the clergyman. "Musha, an don't you know, sir? That it is the great Dane Swift! Did you never see him before?" "No, indeed; but I often hear tell of him. And pray where are you going?" "To heaven, straight." "Well, I think you're astray." "Not a bit astray or mistaken, sir. My master's praying and I'm fasting." The boy did not speak so low but that the dean might hear him. He did hear him, and the next inn they passed he ordered a good breakfast for both.

The Old Told Snake Story.

It was first set down in writing by Joachim, long after Saint Patrick's death that he collected all the reptiles of poisonous species at Croagh Patrick—a mountain a few miles south of Westport, Mayo county, Ireland—and drove them into the ocean. The exemption of Ireland from snakes and toads was noted long before the arrival of Saint Patrick Solinus, who wrote a hundred years before, mentions the fact, so do Bede and Isidore. Donatus, bishop of Festula near Florence, in a Latin poem describing Ireland, his native country, has this passage:

Her waving furrows float with bearded corn,
And arms and arts her envied sons adorn;
No savage bear with careless fury roves,
Nor ravenous lion through her peaceful groves.
No poison there infects, no scaly snakes
Creep through the grass, nor frogs annoy the lakes.

An island worthy of her pious race,
In war triumphant and unmatched in peace.

Erin's Hope.

For years sweet Erin's harp's been sadly ringing
In cadence to her song of weary woe;
But soon her voice will rise in joyous singing
And tell "Saint Patrick's bade the gloom to go!"

And as the storied snakes were ever banished
Even so will he grim British rule dethrone.
And on that day (when all his evils vanished)
Our Erin free will be—our loved, our own! —Anon.

Taxing the Air.

Lady Carteret, the wife of the Irish lord lieutenant, said to Dean Swift. "The air of Ireland is very excellent and healthy." "For God's sake, madam," said Swift, "don't say so in England, for if you do they will certainly tax us for it."

AN ANGLO-IRISHMAN'S WIT.

"I'll commit you, sir," roared an indignant judge to Curran, who had denounced the grand jury. "I hope you'll never commit a worse thing, my lord," retorted Curran.

"No man," said a wealthy upstart, "should be admitted to the bar who has not an independent landed property." "May I ask, sir," said Curran, "how many acres make a wisecrack?"

A barrister entered the court with such a peculiar wig that it caused a general titter. "Do you see anything ridiculous in my wig?" he asked. "Nothing but the head, sir," Curran replied.

Describing an extremely pompous and solemn man Curran said, "He would not even be seen to smile lest the world should think he was too familiar with himself."

When John Philpott Curran and "Bully" Egan met on the dueling ground, the latter complained of the advantage his antagonist had over him and declared that he was as easily hit as a haystack, while as to firing at Curran, he might as well fire at a razor's edge. Whereupon Curran waggishly proposed that his size should be chalked out on Egan's side, and that "every shot which hits outside that mark should go for nothing."

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

The Result of Being Nearly Captured by a Band of Blackfoot Sioux.

Mr. Andrew Lindsey, who has lived near Pease Bottom, Mont., for many years, was in Washington a short time ago, and in response to the request of a Star reporter, said: "Well, no man ever applied to me in vain for a story, so here goes: I want to tell you a yarn about how a man's hair was turned gray in one whack. It was just after the Custer massacre that an old fellow named Pease—we call him Major Pease, because, I believe, he had been in the war of the rebellion—well, he pressed forward several miles beyond the hog-back where the famous fight took place, and built a stockade at what came to be called, after him, 'Pease Bottom. He and his men were carrying on a very thriving trade with the redskins, but at that time this business had to be conducted with great caution, because the savages were ugly and scalp hungry. Two miles from the stockade was a high point, from which a survey of the country could be had for miles in all directions. A lookout was kept here for the Indians, and suspicious circumstances or warlike demonstrations were at once reported to headquarters. One afternoon in the summer a man named Paul McCormick and his partner, named Edwards, were sent out to the observatory. They were riding along at a gallop through the tall grass and were approaching the mouth of a little coulie. Edwards wasn't a tenderfoot, but he was a newcomer in that region. As they careered along, McCormick said: 'Edwards, what would you do if the Indians should bounce out of that coulie?' 'Well, I'd either fight or run.' These words hadn't fallen from his lips before bang! went a rifle and a warwhoop rent the air. Poor Edwards dropped from his horse, and Mac, hard pressed by a band of Blackfoot Sioux, made for the stockade. The people there knew what was up, and the pursuers were picked off as they came within range of the lead. The gates were opened and McCormick rushed in. His hair was white and has continued so. The body of Edwards was found in the bloody and disordered grass, and the scalp was missing. It was buried on the spot, and the legend of Edwards' Coulie is one of the best known in the far West. The folks at the stockade put up a rude headboard, but this has long ago gone to decay.

PREACHERS IN A BOX CAR.

An Enraged Engineer Gave Them a Rough Ride on a New Road.

A party of sedate Maine clergymen who recently went over the new Bangor and Aroostock line from Brownville to the West branch, had a little experience in railroad riding that made their hair stand on end for a time. They were stowed away on the construction train at Brownville on the top of a lot of compressed hay in a box car and spread out their blankets on the bales, expecting to have a very comfortable ride. Just before starting northward from Brownville an altercation arose between the conductor and engineer, and for a few moments the air was sulphurous.

Then the ride began. The engineer, a hot-headed fellow, was mad all through, and when he opened the throttle he did it in no half-hearted or uncertain way. Off sped the train over the rough, uneven road-bed, not yet made ready for trials of speed. Faster and faster she went, the cars lurching and pitching up and down and from side to side in a manner that suggested momentary derailment and everlasting smash. The trees beside the road flew by like streaks of lightning. The hay bales bounced about and bumped against each other without mercy, and all the while the clerical party reeled and jostled like tipsy fellows on a spree.

They hung on for dear life to keep from breaking their necks or from getting crushed. Those who have tried it know that the inside of a box car does not afford many points of vantage for one to steady himself, and really all the ministers could do was to thump each other whenever occasion offered.

The entire run to North Twin station was made at an average not far short of a mile a minute, and it was with a sigh of relief that they alighted from the train. It pleases them now to say that the engineer was reported to Superintendent Cram and was promptly bounced before he had endangered any more lives or property of the company.

Bad Little Hawaii.

In Hawaii last year 2,282 persons were arrested for drunkenness, 366 for "deserting contract service," 307 for gambling, ten for murder, seventy-seven for violation of carriage ordinances, one for "permitting a ferocious beast abroad," one for attempting to leave the kingdom without a permit" and 111 for "disturbing the quiet of the night."

First Coins of the Hebrews.

The Hebrews had no coins of their own until the days of the Maccabees, who issued shekels and half shekels, with the inscriptions, "Jerusalem the Holy, Simon, Prince of Israel." These bear no images.

SOME POINTS ABOUT THE MID-WINTER FAIR

IT'S A GOOD SECOND TO THE CHICAGO SHOW.

The Exhibits Not so Numerous, but the Effect Would Not Suffer in Comparison—A Triumph of West Shore Enterprise.

[San Francisco Correspondence.]

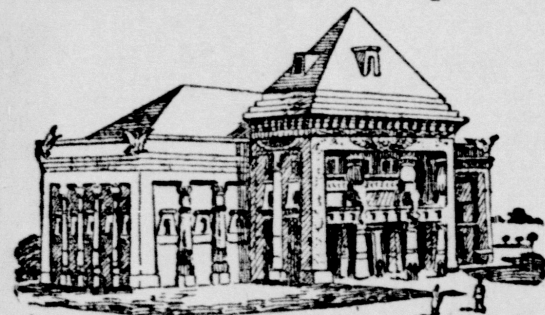

THE ATTENDANCE at the Mid-winter Fair has not yet begun to pay expenses, but it is large enough to cheer everybody. Counting the 75,000 who turned out opening day the total number of visitors during the first two weeks was almost 200,000. But everybody is not satisfied with these figures and the newspapers are calling upon the managers to cut the admittance fee in half. The managers ignored the demand for awhile, but it has grown so strong that they have felt compelled to issue a manifesto arguing against a reduction. It is not unlikely that they will be compelled to yield sooner or later.

Since the opening day no special effort has been made to draw the crowds. It has been the policy of the Exposition management to let the features of the Exposition speak for themselves, and exclamations of surprise and satisfaction have been heard on every hand.

The exhibits are now all in position

FINE ARTS BUILDING.

There are no holes in the floor, so to speak, and it is noticeable by those who visited the great Columbian Exposition that even the exhibits which were seen there appear to have taken on new form here in San Francisco, and the exhibitors have undoubtedly profited by the experience gained on the shore of Lake Michigan. The largest spaces in the center of the great floor of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building are occupied by France, Germany, Russia and Italy. Each of these countries is represented by a display of artistic and useful manufactures which has never before been seen outside of the great Columbian Exposition, and in most instances the displays brought from there have been augmented by new supplies brought across the Atlantic and across the continent especially for this display.

But in the midst of all this that is not new to everybody, there is so much in the Midwinter Exposition that is universally unique and novel that there is nothing of the "old story" about it. The American section is particularly prolific in novelty, and it occupies the largest place assigned to any one country, so that the international character of the Exposition by no means shuts out the glorification of home industries in this beautiful industrial fair.

The display of paintings in the Fine Arts building is the most gratifying feature of the Fair. It far exceeds in size and merit anything ever seen in this part of the world. The chief of the fine arts department did not wholly depend upon Chicago to furnish his walls, though many of his canvases came from the Columbian Exposition. There are pictures by well-known American, French and German artists, and prominent among them are a hundred of the works of the best artists on the Pacific coast. Connoisseurs say that the Midwinter Art Palace is the best arranged picture gallery that the world has ever seen, and it certainly is well adapted for the purpose to which it is put.

In the eyes of eastern visitors the citrus display naturally attracts the most attention. It seems to be good for eastern eyes to encounter a pear as big as a baby's head and peaches almost as large, to say nothing of so many oranges in heaps and piles and buildings that there is a great gleam of yellow before them all the time. The rivalry between the northern and southern citrus fairs, both of which are held in the exposition grounds, has been happily productive of the best displays in this line that have ever been made, even in California. The buildings devoted to this class of displays are proving quite as popular as some of the main exposition buildings, and California citrus fruits are getting the best advertisement they have ever had. One feature of the exposition which has emphasized itself since the opening day is the excellence of the electric illuminations. The system of arc lighting is as complete as any one could wish, and the incandescent system is well calculated to arouse enthusiasm. In these beautiful midwinter evenings, whether the moon shines or not, the entire exposition grounds are as light as day. Long lines of incandescent lights stretch the entire length of each of the main buildings and outline all their architectural points. The dome of the Administration building is outlined against the deep blue sky, the straight lines of the Mechanic Arts building are clear cut against the background of the night, the classic outlines of the Fine Arts Palace enhance the effect that structure always has and the peculiarly effective architecture of the great Palace of Manufactures and Liberal Arts seems never to be seen at better advantage than when its thousands of incandescent electric lights are lighted.

The Horticulture and Agriculture building, however, is the one that seems to attract most attention in this particular. This is perhaps due to the fact that its lines contain more curves and more architectural eccentricities than any other, but it is undoubtedly due in a larger degree to the great flood of light which pours through the big glass dome that surmounts the building. Visitors seem at a loss to decide whether the prettier picture is presented by day, when the deep green of California's midwinter foliage lends its aid, or at night, when artificial light plays so prominent a part. All are agreed, however, that the California Midwinter International Exposition is the prettiest world's fair that has ever been held upon God's footstool, and the concessionaires, many of whom have staked their all to cross the continent and share the success of this industrial venture, and who may be conceded to be good judges of the promise of such an exposition, are united in the opinion that this fair will be an immense success.

A Deep Sea Thermometer.

The deep sea thermometer, as invented abroad and improved by officers of the United States navy, is a marvelously ingenious and effective contrivance. It is in effect a self-registering instrument, though not technically so called. The thermometer is so arranged that it is automatically turned upside down when the machinery begins to draw it up from the depth at which the temperature is to be ascertained. The effect of the inverting process is to break the column of mercury, and a small portion of the column remains in the upper end of the tube, exactly enough to measure the temperature at the moment of inversion. The tube is graduated so as to read from either end, and the quantity of mercury in the upper part of the tube is so small that it does not respond to any but great and sudden changes of temperature. It thus happens that the reading, when the thermometer reaches the surface, is practically correct for the temperature at the point of inversion.

A Slight Matrimonial Difficulty.

While two wedding processions were fighting for the road at one of the gates at Hankow, China, the chairs holding the brides got mixed and each lady was taken to the wrong bridegroom. The gentlemen never having seen their wives before, according to the Chinese custom, knew no mistake. When the next morning the mothers of the two brides went to present the usual hair oil to their daughters each found a stranger installed in her place. Neither mother, moreover, had any means of finding out where her daughter had gone. After a very difficult search of the city the brides were both found, and then the idea of making the best of things was blocked by the fact that one of the brides, who was rich and intended for a rich husband, had fallen into the hands of a very poor man. The problem remains unsolved.

France for Active Women.

In one of the United States reports Consul Loomis, commenting on the part taken by French women in business affairs, says there is perhaps no other nation where the women take so intelligent and active a part in these matters as they do in France. In the small shopkeeping class the women, as a rule, have much better judgment than their husbands and are the real brains and life of the trade. The wife of a French tradesman, artisan or farmer is generally his cashier and accountant. She takes care of the savings and invests them; she is much brighter than her husband, a good deal more industrious in a very large number of instances, and does not hesitate to assert herself, particularly if she was the possessor of a dot when she was married.

Plating Aluminium.

A process of plating aluminium has been devised by Prof. Neesen, a German chemist, which shows very good results. The aluminium is first dipped in a solution of caustic potash or soda, or in muriatic acid, until bubbles of gas begin to appear, then into corrosive sublimate, then a second time into the caustic or acid, and finally into a solution of a salt of the desired metal. A film of the metal is rapidly formed, and adheres so firmly that, in the case of gold, silver or copper, the plate may be rolled out or polished.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

How Paxton started the Idea of Such a Great Structure.

Looking at the many half crowns and shillings with which I have parted in order to be able to enjoy a cigar without official interference, I can scarcely withhold some slight sympathy from the railway guards, whose supplementary emoluments have been so cruelly cut down by the introduction of smoking carriages, remarks a London writer. Oddly enough, a surreptitious railway cigar plays a little part in the history of the great exhibition of 1851. Charles Dickens was never tired of telling a story in which the chief actors were Joseph Paxton, king of gardeners, and Robert Stephenson, the illustrious engineer.

Paxton was on the board of directors of a railway company, and had been attending a meeting at Derby. There was a great talk at the time about the competition for designs for the exhibition buildings in Hyde park, and in the interval of business Paxton sketched on a piece of blotting paper his first idea of an exhibition palace, which was practically a great greenhouse of iron and glass, in shape resembling three immensely long packing cases, superimposed on each other, and diminishing in breadth and length as they ascended.

The meeting over, Paxton returned to town, taking his blotting-paper sketch with him. In a first-class railway compartment he met Robert Stephenson. The absorbing topic of the day, that of the exhibition buildings, swiftly arose, and Paxton produced his sketch and showed it to the great engineer. Before glancing at it the mighty builder of railway bridges, who was an inveterate smoker, lighted a big cigar. "It's wonderful, it's astonishing," cried Robert Stephenson in honest admiration; "it is the only design that can possibly be accepted; only, as regards its form, it wants something, but I cannot exactly tell what that something is. I am an engineer and not an architect. This sketch must be shown to Charles Barry."

The sketch, or rather an elaborate drawing of Paxton's design, was submitted to the distinguished architect of the houses of parliament, who, fully sharing the admiration expressed by Robert Stephenson, said quietly: "It only wants a transept." A transept was added and the crystal palace was born.

HE RECOGNIZED ABILITY.

An Interesting Story of the Late George W. Childs.

A remarkable instance of his good judgment was shown several years ago, when a certain business man came to Philadelphia to establish himself. This business man had a moderate amount of capital. He launched out in a liberal style of advertising. This and his desire methods of business led a number of Philadelphia people to think that he would not last long. Mr. Childs thought well of him, and as he was always ready to encourage new ventures he offered this merchant an unlimited credit in his advertising columns. As the rule of the Ledger office is cash down for everything in the way of advertisements, this exception in favor of a new man who was at best experimenting in establishing himself was very remarkable.

The new merchant availed himself of this offer. His bills for advertising soon became very large. The cashier of the Ledger office became nervous. He went to Mr. Childs several times and said:

"Do you know this man owes us $30,000?"

Mr. Childs said: "Never mind." The bill became $40,000, and yet Mr. Childs made no sign of withdrawing his favor. The bill reached the sum of $60,000 before the merchant came near Mr. Childs to say one word about paying. One morning he walked in and said:

"Mr. Childs, you have been very kind to me. Your credit has done much to maintain confidence in my ability to succeed. People have said, if Mr. Childs can trust him, we all can. The result is that I am now upon my feet, and can settle my bill to-day if you will take $40,000 of it in trade dollars."

Mr. Childs accepted the offer, and sold them afterward as bullion. He thus recovered the full amount of his debt, and thereby gained a very loyal and devoted business friend. This merchant whom he thus favored is to-day one of the most prosperous merchants in Philadelphia.

SOLD FORGERIES.

And Then Sold the Means by Which They Could Be Detected.

Among the counterfeiters of comparatively modern times the German, Becker, stands pre-eminent. With incredible skill he engraved dies of upward of 300 types of coins, principally Roman, and, as most of these were struck in gold—a metal that does not change in appearance with time—he realized large sums from unwary collectors. Becker was a man of resource, and some sense of humor. How to take off the appearance of novelty from the freshly-struck coin was a question of difficult solution. He solved it thus: He had a small box constructed, which he partly filled with iron filings and screwed to the springs of his carriage, and in that box he placed his newly-struck coins, and then, as he expressed it, "took his old gentleman a drive" on the road between Frankfurt and Offenbach.

The coins came out of the box still fresh, but with the too glaring bloom of youth, judiciously toned down. At length the market was overdone with his productions and Becker, having ceased to counterfeit new sold complete sets of impressions in lead from his dies to the museums and collectors who had formerly purchased his forgeries, so that there might be no difficulty in identifying what was his handiwork.

Within the last few years numbers of forgeries of extremely rare coins in the British museum and in private collections have been sold by auction in London. So good is their execution that it seems probable that means have been devised for casting steel dies or plaster casts or of hardening electrotypes dies. The manufacture of rare "siege pieces," carried on in one of our midland towns, shows a far lower amount of skill.

When genuine, but defaced, coins are re-struck with new impressions, it is very difficult to discover the fraud. Some genuine ancient coins are surfrapped in this manner—as, for instance, a whole class of Jewish coins which are struck on Roman silver denarii. But when the image and superscription of William III. can be discerned underlying the device on a rare crown piece of Elizabeth, the question of its authenticity is soon solved.
